

ing the manner in which the distribution was made.

No accounts of any description may be paid from these moneys, but each Indian's money must be handed to himself, except in the case of an Indian absent from the Reserve, who may give a written order to another Indian to receive his share which may be paid to the latter.

If the Post Office address of an absentee is known, his share may be sent to him by Post Office Order only and the number of the Post Office Order should be inserted opposite the name on the Pay List. In the case of other absentees their
