VIETIM OF A WOMAN

Seattle Business Man Goes Wrong

While Posing as Insurance Agent Commits a Number of Robberies.

Seattle, April 12.—E. F. Boucke or E. Forrest, the man the police accuse of leading a double life, one of seeming respectability and religious' pre-eminence, and the other of crime, which startled and terrorized the community, has been brought back to this city from Sacramento, Cal.; by Detective Lane of the police department, arriving yesterday morning. Boucke is charged with binding, gagging and blindfolding the Black fam-ly at Green Lake, while he, with a companion, robbed the household of money and valuable possessions, some of which he later gave to his wife—the woman with whom he ran away—and placed in jewelry stores and pawn shops.

The police regard Boucke as one of the most remarkable criminals with whom they have had to deal. They say they trace his hand in highway robberies, in such crimes as that committed in the Black home, when the gamblers were threatened with cremation in case they did not reveal the hiding place of money, and in dark deeds of the wildest type. All the while he was respected as a business man and bore the appearance rather of a minister of the gospel than of a daring criminal.

Finishing a series of crimes of the most extravagant nature, the police say they have evidence that Forrest, as he was known here at the time, abandoned his wife and three children, to travel under a still different name of Tennant to San Francisco in company with Lena May Molitor, a woman about whom little good is known by the detectives and police officers. The two went to Aberdeen and thence to California. In San Francisco Boucke became an insurance agent, as he had been employed by his insurance concern in this city.

By chance the detectives learned of his whereabouts after they discovered an alleged connection with the various crimes which they were investigating. The San Francisco authorities were instructed to arrest the man and word soon came that he had been taken by the police of Sacramento, where he seemed to be living with his paramour as man and wife under the name of Tennant. He admitted he had left his Seattle wife, but declared he was forced to do so through her Christian Science vagaries and his unpleasant domestic life.

Registration papers were procured on the governor of California and Detective Lane started immediately after the fugitive. He feared some trouble might be encountered there in bringing the prisoner northward, but this was done without incident. Boucke maintains that he is innocent of any crime, asserting that his change of name was due to his desire to conceal his identity and whereabouts from his wife.

It was to cover an alleged shortage in his accounts and also to secure money to lavish on the woman who had found favor in his eyes that Boucke was led to live his life of duplicity, say the police, appearing to the world during the day as a man of exemplary character and sallying forth at night on deeds of depredation. These officers declare they have almost positive proof of the acts which they impute to the man under arrest.

Boucke was in the employ of an insurance company having offices in the Arcade building. He is of dignified and reserved mien and from his appearance would scarcely be termed a dangerous man.

Nearly all the robberies charged to Boucke were from women. A sort of an epidemic of crime was begun when a woman was held up in one of the suburban districts and relieved of her jewelry, and soon after one or two similar highway robberies were reported. Then the Moore home was entered on Thirty-second avenue and $750 worth of jewels and money was taken. While the aged Mrs. Moore and her grandson, merely a lad, were bound to their chairs and pillowslips were placed over their heads. A $30,000 shawl of ancient weave was missed by the robbers.

Not long after that another woman was nearly killed with fright on entering her house when two men jumped from a closet and bound and gagged her, while her valuables were stolen. Soon after that the Black robbery occurred. In the meanwhile between these affairs there occurred a number of highway robberies and other crimes of lesser magnitude.

Toward the latter part of this epidemic it was suggested to the police that Boucke might have some knowledge of the operations which seemed to be connected through their similarity, but the detectives at first scoffed at the idea. They could not find that Boucke's associates were of a bad type, and as far as could be learned his life was as it should be.

The intelligence that the man might be the highwayman forced itself upon the minds of the police officers through finding at a jeweler's a nugget pin which had been taken from the Black home. The jeweler stated that there was something in the manner of Boucke to cause suspicion when he left the pin to be repaired. A few days later a physician in conversation with Detectives Lane and Adams remarked the prevalence of crime and said a man of his acquaintance had pledged a watch with him, and incidentally had remarked that the police were trying hard to find the robbers, while he could lay his hands on them at any time. This man proved to be Boucke.

Thus the connection was established, and almost at every turn the detectives were confronted with more evidence against the insurance agent. About that time the latter left the city, and for several weeks all clues were lost, until a letter was received by the insurance company which said he intended to make up the deficiency in his accounts and would send the money soon. The name of Tennant was signed and an address in San Francisco was given. The letter stated that the writer was doing well there and did not wish to return to Seattle.

The specific charge of robbery is made against Boucke in a complaint and a preliminary examination will be held shortly. The detectives are trying hard to locate the accomplice and believe they will make an arrest or two very soon.

Fights the Police

Seattle, April 12.—Mrs. J. Evans, violently insane, fought with two policemen and came near inflicting severe injuries on each with sharp scissors, wielded with the strength and fierce cunning of a maniac, yesterday morning in the store of J. Matzer, 1307 Second avenue, where she had been employed as a seamstress. Fighting her captors all the while, she was taken to police headquarters and then to the county jail, where she probably will be examined for her sanity.

The other women in the tailoring department of the store notified the proprietor early in the morning that Mrs. Evans seemed disordered mentally, and that they would not work with her. He notified the police, and Patrolman Bunnell was sent to the scene, while the patrol wagon, with Jailor Corbett, was dispatched from headquarters. Bunnell, entering the store, was shown the woman in the rear, sitting quietly and manicuring her finger nails.

Going to her and speaking a few words, the policeman found her talking rambling, and when he asked her to walk out of the store she grasped a pair of scissors and viciously plunged them toward the body of the blue coat. By a quick movement he avoided harm to himself, and snatched the weapon from the hand of the woman. But with the other hand she quickly picked up another pair of the cutting instruments, from the table by her side, and it seemed that the patrolman could not avoid the blow, when Corbett caught her wrist, and she was led to the wagon, struggling desperately.

For the last six weeks Mrs. Evans has been employed in the Second avenue store, and by her employer is said to have acted strangely at times. The police know nothing of her, her relatives or her home.

Tom McMullen, owner of the Star road house on No. 22 below Bonanza, was doing business at the Forks yesterday.

S. T. Kincaid, one of the Adams hill mine owners and one of the most extensive operators there, was looking after his interests at the Forks yesterday.

The water is running on Bonanza creek and on the road in places at a terrific speed; in fact there is so much water on the road that one of the fair passengers on the Dawson Transfer stage became seasick coming down this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson of No. 6 below Bonanza who went outside last fall, returned last Sunday. While outside Mr. and Mrs. Johnson travelled through all the eastern states. Mr. Johnson owns valuable property on Cheechaco hill.

Teamsters on Bonanza are complying with the law by using four-inch tire wagons.

Mr. Joe Schermann commenced sluicing last Saturday on the hillside right limit opposite No. 3 above Bonanza.

Messrs. Perkins & McConnell intend to begin sluicing on Little Skookum today.

The Bonanza saloon at the Forks is undergoing a number of extensive improvements. The building formerly a one story structure is being raised to a two story. The ceiling will be raised about two feet, and the second story will be divided into sleeping compartments. In connection with the Bonanza Messrs. Falk & Johnson are running a first class restaurant. They have recently opened up and are doing a fine business. Everything is lively at the Forks. The Grand Hotel there is always crowded. The owners of the Eldorado, Johnson & Bostrom, have a good trade. Cockney Joe of the Miners' Friend restaurant has a big crowd from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. The German bakery owned by Fred Tiemeyer continues to hold the trade as of yore. No matter how hard the times or how scarce the dough, Fred always has plenty of dough both in his pocket and dough to bake. He is doing a rushing business. Oscar Anderson, one of the leading business men at the Forks, has opened up the Damfino cigar store there. Fresh paint is the leading article for sale at the Forks. It can be bought at the restaurants, clothing stores, cigar stores, stage offices or any old place. They all have signs out "Fresh paint."

Mr. Wm. Rowe of No. 24 below Bonanza is afraid of high water. He is moving today to No. 26 below to a higher location.

O'Reilly Bros. of the Forks will give one more dance before the rush of work begins. They are preparing for the big thing to come off next Thursday night. This will be a May day dance, though given the last day of April it will be May when the crowd goes home singing "After the ball is over."

ALIEN LABOR.

Will be Deported From United States

Seattle, April 17.—California fruit growers, according to the testimony given before the board of inquiry which has been in session in the custom house for the past several days, are engaged in importing contract labor from Japan in large numbers.

The Kaga Maru on her last trip, started the fall-rolling and brought over six who, after trial, were ordered returned. The Aki came in next, with three women and one man. The women were nurses, and although under contract with a Japanese hospital in Oakland, they were yesterday released from custody by the board on the grounds that they belonged to the professional class. However, the man, like the arrivals on the Kaga, was ordered deported.

Thursday morning the Victorian arrived from the Orient and docked at Tacoma. Yesterday the authorities brought over six Japanese who were believed to be contract laborers. Three of them were found to be and were ordered deported. The other three were released, having shown to the satisfaction of the board that they were all right in every respect.

This makes ten Japanese who have arrived on Puget sound on the last three boats, all of whom have admitted they were hired in Japan to come to California to work in the fruit fields at $1 a day. These facts have been reported to the treasury department by the board composed of Chinese Inspector Thos. M. Fisher, Deputy Collector Thomas R. Delaney and Special Deputy Collector Malone, and it is not improbable there will be some action taken against the alleged California violators of the immigration laws.

In the southern California fruit fields for the past three years there have been labor troubles. The growers refuse to pay the wages demanded by the white laborers, which is $2 a day, and this year it is believed have resorted to importing Japanese to do the work at one-half the price.

Their operations, according to the testimony of the laborers brought over, are all conducted through a Japanese contractor located at San Francisco. The men say they have been promised $1 a day, and from this sum, for the first seven months of their employment, pay to the contractor $3 a month for securing them the positions.

Not in several years has there been the same amount of contract labor arriving on Puget sound as there is at the present time. The immigration laws provide that where a man is convicted of importing alien labor he shall be subject to imprisonment in the United States penitentiary and beside this the person imported has the right to recover damages from the person importing him in the sum of $1,000, and the United States attorney is obliged to prosecute such action for damages.

Her Heart Broken.

Boise, Idaho, March 27.—A sad story of a crushed heart, caused by unrequited love, resulting in years of untold agony, patiently borne and finally culminating in mental derangement came to light in the probate court during the examination of Augusta Wilhelm for insanity.

It appears from what was brought out during the examination that Augusta, who is but 23 years of age, was as happy as any of her playmates in her far-off home in Germany until her path was crossed by one who seemed to her to embody all the life, worth living for. Her brother and sister both testified that previous to the time when she came to this country, about three years ago, she was as happy as one could well be.

A very peculiar circumstance connected with the story is the fact that neither the brother nor sister knew the cause of the unfortunate girl's misery, and it was by the mere chance that the examining physician happened onto it. The doctor had considerable difficulty, and it was only by means of coaxing that he succeeded in learning the facts connected with her heartrending story.

It appeared from the testimony of the patient and her brother, and sister that Augusta has been growing gradually worse ever since she left the Fatherland and came to America, leaving her boy lover on the other side of the great water. A sort of harmless melancholia seems to be the form her insanity has taken. The brother and sister both testified that she had spoken to her mother about the affair, but that she had not taken her sister into her confidence. She had hugged her grief to her own heart, where it weighed so heavily that her mind gave way as the result.

The main features of her derangement are quietness, lack of appetite, melancholia, sleeplessness and a gradual falling away in flesh and strength. An uncle had once been afflicted with insanity and it is thought there may be some taint of heredity that perhaps caused the mind to give way sooner than it otherwise might have done. The doctor stated there was some slight hope that she might improve with careful and proper treatment, and she was committed to the asylum where she can be properly cared for.

Turned to Kyle

Cincinnati, April 11.—Republican leaders from Columbus and other parts of Ohio were in conference with transportation managers in Cincinnati in the interest of Congressman Thomas Barton Kyle, of Troy, for the Republican nomination for governor. It was claimed that the conditions following the elections last Monday in the state were such as to call for a new man, or at least, one in the southern half of the state, and the announcement was made that Congressman Kyle would be supported by a number of counties in the southwestern part of Ohio.
