LOSING LOVE OF HOME.

Lady Colin Campbell's Arraignment of Fellow Women.

Lady Colin Campbell, apropos of the close of the London season, has a word to say through the medium of The London Daily Chronicle on the decadence of home life and woman's responsibility for the evil.

"The wife doesn't attempt nowadays," says Lady Colin, "to become the comrade of her husband. She thinks her duties fulfilled when she has seen to the ordering of dinner. The rest of her time she tries to kill as best she may. Hence home, that is the harbor for the husband, becomes a wearisome prison for her, from which she is only too glad to escape on any pretext.

"In the fertile soil of idleness have sprung up three evil weeds which have done more than anything else to destroy a woman's love of home. These three things are women's clubs and bridge among the upper and middle classes and religious revivals among the lower.

The passion for bridge has accentuated a thousandfold the dislike of home which was begun by women's clubs. The overmastering desire to obtain money which has not been earned by work is about the most disintegrating and vulgar passion to which a human being can fall victim, and when an idle woman gives way to this insidious excitement home life may be in vain. The worst part of the bridge craze is its effect on young girls. What chance is there of a girl ever developing a love of home when she has once drunk deep of the excitement of afternoons and evenings devoted to bridge and the winning or losing of money? The feminine brain is not as a rule remarkable for its strength of balance, and its tendency to exaggeration either in good or evil is a well known characteristic.

Lord Curzon's Position.

Marquise de Fontenay: I am violating no confidence by stating that I had it not been for the intended visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales, the resignation of Lord Curzon would have been requested by the English Government. The relations of the viceroy with the Cabinet have been subjected to a severe strain, first in connection with the Tibet expedition and treaty, and more recently in relation to the controversy on the subject of Lord Kitchener. Indeed, Lord Curzon has tried the patience of the King and of the Cabinet sorely of late, and the speeches which he has been delivering in India, both in the viceroy's council and elsewhere, condemning, not only Lord Kitchener, but likewise the Cabinet's support and endorsement of the latter, have excited the deepest resentment in London. It is only fair to add that Lord Curzon is a sick man, with overstrained nerves and that his tenure of the magnificent office of viceroy of India has not precisely contributed to diminish that extravagant conceit and conviction in his own superiority to everyone else, that are the principal faults of one of the most brilliant servants of the British Crown.

A Perfectly Happy Man.

The late U. S. Secretary of State John Hay was fond of telling a story of a King who once upon a time fell into a state of deep melancholy. Court physicians could do nothing for him and were in despair when a certain very wise man bethought himself of the well known cure of sleeping in the shirt of a perfectly happy man overnight. So courtiers were dispatched everywhere in search of the shirt of a perfectly happy man. One by one they returned from their fruitless search throughout the vast kingdom. At last, only one courtier remained out, and he, too, began to despair of finding the shirt of a perfectly happy man. It was just about twilight and he was riding over a village green when he was attracted by the careless laughter of a disreputable beggar who was stretched full length upon the sward.
"Are you a perfectly happy man?" demanded the courtier, reining in his horse.
"You bet!" said the beggar.
"A thousand crowns for the loan of your shirt!"
"But I ain't got none," replied the beggar.

Something About Salt.

Salt, which is an article in daily use in the humblest homes, has a number of interesting facts concerning it.
Salt is used all over the world much in the same way as water, animals and human beings alike craving for it. In some parts of Africa children will eat it in preference to sugar, and on the Gold Coast a handful of salt will purchase two slaves.
The Germans call salt "the gift of God" and used to believe that prayers were better answered when offered near salt. In the east salt is considered sacred. All oaths taken over it are inviolable, and when an Arab offers salt to a guest he guarantees his safety.
The Romans believed that if the salt put on a sacrifice fell off it presaged disaster; hence the origin of the "bad luck" attendant on salt spilling.

Antiquity of the Wig.

The wig, frequently worn by an antiquity, is also something of an antiquity.
Wigs have been found on mummies dug up in Egypt and Babylonia, showing that they were commonly used 4,000 years ago.
Prior to the French revolution the wig was in great vogue in France, England and America.
Almost everybody wore a wig regardless of the quantity of natural hair on his or her head.
Nowadays about the only person in the world who wears a wig for other than necessary purposes is the speaker of the British House of Commons. He wears one because it is one of the penalties of this office.

Fishing.

First Fisherman—How long did it take you to catch all those fish?
Second Fisherman—Three flasks.

The Deadly Cobra.

Most deadly of all snakes is the cobra, or cobra de capello. It inhabits India and Ceylon, Burma, the Andamans, southern China, Indo-China and the Malay peninsula and archipelago. To the west it ranges to Afghanistan, northeast Persia and south Turkistan as far as the east coast of the Caspian Sea. Cobras are most active at night. They feed on small animals, birds' eggs, frogs, fish and insects. They attack hen-roosts and swallow the eggs whole. They drink a great deal of water, although they can live for weeks, even months, in captivity without touching food or water. As a rule, they are not aggressive, and unless interfered with or irritated they crawl along the ground with neck undilated, looking like some harmless snake.

Dysentery

IS a form of diarrhoea, and consists of copious and frequent liquid discharges from the bowels, accompanied by painful straining sensations. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is a specific for diarrhoea, dysentery, and all summer complaints, and has been a well-known remedy for 60 years. You are not taking a new and untried remedy when you use Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mrs. M. A. SUMMERFIELD, Canboro, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in my family for years, and have always found it a wonderful remedy for Diarrhoea and Dysentery. I know of a great many others who have used it with the most satisfactory results."

REFUSE ALL SUBSTITUTES.
THEY'RE DANGEROUS.

Told of Two English Premiers.

Queen Victoria once wrote to Lord Palmerston, then Premier of England, expressing the wish that she could speak from his place in the House of Commons. Palmerston replied that it was fortunate for those from whose opinion Her Majesty differed that she was not in the House of Commons, for they would have to encounter a formidable antagonist in argument; although, on the other hand, those whose opinions Her Majesty approved would have had the support of a powerful ally in debate. Disraeli, when Premier, had a more direct way in dealing with women. One of them once attempted to get a certain piece of information from him. He listened to what she had to say and then answered: "Oh, you darling!"

Self-reliance is self-sustaining. A man should be built from within, but not from without.

An old dress, like a kind friend, sometimes does a woman a good turn.

TAKE MY CURE, WHEN CURED YOU PAY ME

The fear that you could not be cured may have deterred you from taking honest treatment, or you may have been one of the unfortunate who have been treated in vain by inexperienced physicians, free treatments, free trial samples, patent medicines, electric belts and other similar devices. Such treatments cannot and will never cure you, nor will these maladies cure themselves. When I offer you a cure, and am willing to risk my professional reputation in curing you, and have such faith and confidence in my continued success in treating these diseases that not a dollar need be paid until you are cured, a fairer proposition cannot be offered to the sick and afflicted. This should convince the skeptical that I mean what I say, and do exactly as I advertise, as I am positive in curing you, and my guarantee is simple and true. Not a dollar need be paid until cured. I have 14 medals and certificates from the various colleges and state boards of medical examiners, which should be sufficient guarantee of my standing and abilities. It makes no difference who has failed to cure you, it will be to your advantage to write to me for my opinion of your case, which I give you free of charge. I want to hear from patients who have been unable to get cured, as I guarantee a positive cure for all chronic, nervous, blood and skin diseases which I accept for treatment. I not only cure the complications, such as rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles, blood poison, physical and nervous debility, lack of vitality, stomach troubles, etc. All medicines for Canadian patients sent from Windsor, Ont., duty and transportation prepaid. I will send a booklet on the subject which contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address simply, Dr. S. Goldberg, 26 Woodward Ave., Suite 311, Detroit, Mich.

MRS. BOOKER T. WASHINGTON

She is Doing Good Work Toward the Uplifting of Her Race.

Mrs. Booker T. Washington, wife of the famous negro educator of Tuskegee, Ala., is a hard worker for the good of the colored people of this country and is a faithful and energetic aid to her husband in his efforts for the uplifting of her race.

Mrs. Washington is a well educated negro woman and as modest as any everyday American matron. She is a large woman and tall and has regular features, magnetic eyes, beautiful teeth and good language, with the southern drawl.

This colored woman of the south is a teacher, although she has several children. Five hundred negro girls who are thirsting for better things are under her care at Tuskegee. As a girl she was educated at Fisk college and then went to Tuskegee as an instructor. She fell in love with Booker Washington, married him and went on teaching.

"I think it is too bad a woman has to give up teaching after her marriage," said Mrs. Washington to a reporter. "I know lots of married women who would like to take up teaching again, but I guess they don't dare."

"I'd rather be in the Tuskegee school than traveling about with my husband. Getting into the public eye has its disadvantages. My husband, can tell you that. He hasn't got over laughing at a certain minister's address, in which he said Mr. Washington was the worst beggar in the world."

"Maybe he is the worst beggar. But then he is not begging for himself. He's begging for the good of the whole world, and that makes a difference."—Detroit News Tribune.

Eight Essentials of Popularity.

First—Remember that a good voice is as essential to self possession as good ideas are essential to fluent language. The voice should be carefully trained and developed. A full, clear, flexible voice is one of the surest indications of good breeding, says the Boston Traveler.

Second—Remember that one may be witty without being popular, voluble without being agreeable, a great talker and yet a great bore.

Third—Be sincere. One who habitually sneers at everything not only renders herself disagreeable to others, but will soon cease to find pleasure in life.

Fourth—Be frank. A frank, open countenance and a clear, cheery laugh are worth far more even socially than "pedantry in a stiff cravat."

Fifth—Be amiable. You may hide a vindictive nature under a polite exterior for a time, as a cat masks its sharp claws in velvet fur, but the least provocation brings out one as quickly as the other, and ill natured people are always disliked.

Sixth—Be sensible. Society never lacks for fools, and what you consider very entertaining nonsense may soon be looked upon as very tiresome folly.

Seventh—Be cheerful. If you have no great trouble on your mind you have no right to render other people miserable by your long face and dolorous tones. If you do you will generally be avoided.

Eighth—Above all, be cordial and sympathetic. True cordiality and sympathy unite all the other qualities enumerated and are certain to secure the popularity so dear to every one.

Women Wage-workers.

Women do not compete with men when they work. Workers are not necessarily competitors. There is competition only when there is not work enough for all and when if some get it others must be unemployed or partly so. Women may be helpers of those who work. Sometimes when there are not enough workers none of them can work to advantage. Coworking is mutually profitable as a rule. The number of women who can work is not so great as materially to diminish men's chances. There is enough for both of the things which both can do equally well and enough for men to do exclusively of those things which women cannot do, while of those things which both can do men have no right to claim a monopoly. If men would stop to think that many women have the same responsibilities that they have, either a widowed mother or sisters and brothers to take care of, there would be less talk of "competition."—Exchange.

The Way to Womanhood.

Every detail about the Oxford Chancellor Range has been built with the object of strength and long service. Each part is constructed of the very best material and mounted by the most skilled workmen.

The ash-pit is deep and wide and fitted with a large pressed-steel ash pan. An outside ash guard is provided.

Oxford Chancellor Range

Between the main bottom and bottom of the range, we have allowed two air spaces, totalling 7 1/4 inches, which protects the floor from over-heating. This is a point that will be most appreciated by those who have had their floors burnt by poorly insulated ranges.

We would like to tell you more about the Oxford Chancellor Range. Won't you write for some of our free booklets?

a girl should be excluded from the studies which experience has proved to be good for a boy—arithmetic, grammar, languages, history, natural science, logic, philosophy and literature.

"I would have her go to school with boys, at least until her tenth year," he says, "and after that if, for good reasons, she goes to a separate school and college I still would have the substance and material of her study much the same as his, the main difference being one of method and purpose, conforming to the use to which her learning is likely to be put. She would have men to teach her as well as women, because neither in work nor in conversation will she spend her life only with her own sex. She should read the common books of the race, the great books written for human beings, not a special library prepared for her."

Have You a Toilet Apron?

Not the least practical of one woman's many traveling conveniences is a toilet apron designed to be used particularly on a sleeping car, but equally practicable on any car or boat where there is a dressing room that provides facilities for making a fresh toilet. It is made of heavy linen, with turned up pockets featherstitched in white or a dainty color, in which brush and comb, hairpins, nail file, etc., can be stowed away. When the belt is fastened around the waist one can be sure of having her toilet articles at hand instead of slipping and sliding over the floor with every lurch of the train. When not in use it can be rolled up and stowed away in the traveling bag, acting as a toilet case. Its convenience cannot be imagined.—Housekeeper.

Some men carry spite to a degree which makes them vindictive.

Bed is not the place for thinking a more than it is the place for repenting. Thinking is guaranteed to keep one wide awake.

A woman who is subject to burn her feet should never wear heelless slippers about her room.
