The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

Has it been your experience, as it has been mine, to see people who otherwise had good manners, raise the napkin above the mouth, rub their eyes, wipe the forehead, in fact use it as a handkerchief, stopping short, only at whipping the nose?" writes a correspondent.

Dear lady, it certainly has. And also, to see other tricks just as bad committed by people who ought to know better.

A man who stuttered was aroused one day when a supercilious person commented on his falling.

"Oh, I guess every-body ha-ha-ha his little eccentricity," he said. "What's that?"

The supercilious person protested that he didn't know that he had any. "Oh, I guess you have," insisted the stutterer. "Now, d-do you eat your soup w-with your left hand or with your r-right?"

"I eat my soup with my right hand, of course."

"Then tha-that's yours," triumphantly pointed out the stutterer, "I eat mine with my spoon."

All of which I have told, simply to introduce the stutterer's philosophy—that every man has his little eccentricity.

I think he has—especially in table manners. It seems as if almost everyone we know, however well bred, has some little disagreeable little trick. Each is horrified at the others' offenses and each calmly commits his own.

And don't think I mean offenses like a failure to pick the right fork or spoon from a bewildering array of implements. I have a thorough sympathy for such a failure—a sympathy, in fact, I am quite willing to admit, from my own bewilderments.

What I mean is flagrant offenses against the laws of decent eating, like that the lady referred to.

Such, for instance, as the public use of the toothpick.

Again and again I have seen well dressed men in nice restaurants and hotels, dining with their wives or sweethearts, sit back and use a toothpick while waiting for their checks.

Again and again I have seen men, and women too, issuing from first class restaurants with toothpicks slanting jauntily from the corners of their mouths.

To repeat something that, although it has been said ten thousand times, can well afford to be repeated since it has been disregarded quite as many—one should never use a toothpick at all. It is neither good for the teeth nor efficacious. Dental floss is the proper implement.

But if you will abuse yourself by using a toothpick, don't abuse the rest of the world by using it in public.

Another extraordinary trick of otherwise decent people, is that of heaping the plate with many kinds of food and allowing them to become mixed up in a muddle that is painfully suggestive of the crumb bucket.

Another is the habit of eating soup from the end of the spoon rather than the side. I have seen a college professor and his wife do that—and do it audibly too.

Another is crumpling crackers and croissants, and so forth, into the soup, instead of eating them separately.

Doubtless none of these is your particular offense.

But don't exonerate yourself too quickly. You may be unconsciously committing some other offense that offends other people as much as these offend you.

Better look out for it.

To quote the stutterer: "Everybody has his little eccentricity. What's yours?"

monia has been added. They should be wiped dry with a clean cloth.

Keeping vegetables in the cooking water after they are done spoils both the look and the taste. After pouring the water off return to the fire for a moment to dry before serving.

To set delicate colors in hand-embroidered handkerchiefs, soak them before washing for 10 minutes in a pail of water into which a dessert-spoonful of turpentine has been stirred.

A quickly-prepared sandwich is made by pulping a banana and adding enough lemon juice to give it the requisite piquancy. Spread on thin slices of brown bread and serve at once.

When using raisins for spice cake, by boiling the fruit for 20 minutes, and substitute the liquor in which they are cooked for part of the milk or molasses. The result will be most satisfactory.

When washing silk use warm but not hot water. In the rinsing water put a teaspoonful of methylated spirit to each gallon, and the silk will look bright and new. Iron with a rather cool iron.

In freezing weather, if windows stick, they can quickly be opened by pouring hot salt water over the casings. This is also the quickest and easiest way to remove ice from slippery steps and pavements.

PATRICK'S COVE NOTES.

Since the shooting season opened there has been a continual crowd of sportsmen going back and forth. While in the cove they put up at the Osborne House, Mrs. P. B. McGrath, proprietress. At times she had some 15 or 20 people at her house, but was assisted by Miss T. McGrath who, though young, proved herself to be a good waitress. Among those who were there were, Rev. Mr. Godden, Dr. Scully, and many others who secured from 20 to 30 birds for a day. Good work indeed!

Mr. E. J. Collins was here the past week on business for Jas. Bindin.

Mr. P. J. Kemp was also here on business for Job Bros & Co.

Miss E. Roache arrived from Branch on Saturday to take the position of T. C. teacher of this place. Miss R. is a third grade teacher, but so intelligent is she that some people would take her to be a A.A. She will I think make a name for herself as an intelligent young teacher.
