Von Tirpitz -- and After

can well imagine the feelings with which he regarded Tirpitz, who, not content with drowning American citizens, continued to heap scurrilous abuse on their government through his reptile press.

Fall of the Mischief-Maker.

The suppression of the "Tageszeitung" was a direct snub to Tirpitz. But a worse one was to follow. Just previous to the sinking of the Arabic the German Chancellor had personally instructed Count Bernstorff, the Ambassador at Washington, to assure President Wilson that U-boats would henceforth be given definite orders not to molest passenger steamers. This can hardly have been done with the consent of Tirpitz, who has always been the supreme authority in naval affairs, and was not prepared to abate one jot of submarine "frightfulness." But the Chancellor ignored him, for once Tirpitz had to suffer it. He was compelled to apologize for the Arabic outrage, and to give a promise of good behaviour in future. Nevertheless it was clear that he continued to urge U-boat commanders to sink and spare not, for the murderous work which, thanks to the vigilance of the British navy, had been interrupted in home waters, went merrily on in the Mediterranean. The situation thus created was plainly intolerable to the more responsible heads of the German government. Evidently matters came to a climax, and the Kaiser had to choose between Tirpitz and practically the rest of the Cabinet en bloc. The result was that after a reign of unprecedented length and power, the wildest mischief-maker in Europe has been driven out of office, to brood in solitude over the ruins of his life's work. The plaudits of his "cultured" countrymen may delight his ears if they are not deafened by the execrations of the whole civilized world. No sneaking sympathy for the man that is down should blind us to the fact that it was Tirpitz who ordered the Lusitania to be sunk, and thus sent in cold blood hundreds of innocent men, women, and little children to an awful death. In Germany his memory may endure as that of a great statesman and administrator. Elsewhere it will live as that of the man who perpetrated the gaslightest crime in the annals of the sea.

Tirpitz the German government is careful to add that no change in naval policy is contemplated. But this assurance need not be taken too acutely. Had "frightfulness as usual" been the order of the day there would have been no reason for the dismissal of the principal exponent of that policy. His fall can only mean that the German government are not determined to subordinate naval to national policy. Evidently they are not prepared to go to war with the United States on the submarine piracy issue, and it is therefore not only possible, but even probable that some modification of the U-boat campaign is in view. The future will show whether the abandonment of the more ruthless methods which have disgraced German naval operations in the past. It must be remembered, however, that those methods were enthusiastically upheld by the German nation, which hailed every fresh violation of the laws of humanity with frantic glee. Hence it would be premature to count on a sudden change in this respect. Public opinion counts for little in Germany, especially in war-time, but even so it would take a stronger man than Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg to risk the fury of the people by depriving them of their favorite weapon against this country. Hence it is safest to assume that submarine piracy will be persisted in, but that more care is likely to be exercised in the treatment of neutral ships and subjects.

What Will His Successor Do?

Admiral von Capelle, the new naval Secretary, has worked for so many years under his predecessor that he is not likely to possess many original ideas, but may be expected to follow pretty closely in the footsteps of his old chief. From all accounts, however, he lacks the masterful resolution which enabled Tirpitz to surmount all opposition. If, as is suggested, the army people in Germany are pressing for more vigorous action by the fleet, Capelle may not be strong enough to resist the demand. Now that Tirpitz has gone the military element is probably supreme, and as it has every reason to be dissatisfied with the role hitherto played by the fleet, it may seize the opportunity to demand from the navy services more useful than that institution has yet performed. It is just possible therefore, that the change of control at the Marine Amt. may hasten the naval offensive which has long been foreshadowed by the feverish activity of the German dockyards.

"MEASLES."

Hundreds of children are suffering from "measles" at the present time, and one has to be very careful in trying to avoid the complications that often follow them.

A heavy "cough" is very prevalent during the present epidemic, and "Pneumonia" is the great danger. Avoid this by keeping a bottle of "Stafford's Phoradone Cough Cure" on hand.

AT THE POPULAR CRESCENT.

Ten thousand Canadian troops being reviewed by the Duke of Cornwall is shown on the screen at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day beside sham battles and other interesting movements of the great Canadian Patriotic. Harry B. Walthall, the favourite Biograph star and Blanche Sweet are featured in "Death's Marathon," a powerful social drama. "Mind Over Motor" is a two reel comedy drama and "Getting Rid of Aunt Kate" is a lively Vitaphone Comedy with Kate Price. Professor McCarthy has arranged and plays a new and appropriate programme of music for this big show; don't miss it.

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."

Where in dull breasts the flame is lit.

A Strike-out—or a Two base Hit?
(Grantland Rice.)

The postponed game between the Wanderers and Red Lions promises to be some exciting. Both have had the advantage of a week's additional practice, and should be in good condition to-morrow.

The Wanderers have the advantage, of course, in their championship lineup of last year being intact, but Hiltz is undaunted, and the pent-up defeats of four years are ranking in his "manly buzzum."

It is reported that the Red Lions have a left handed pitcher which for the present they are keeping under cover. This is what is known as a "Southpaw" and is the dread of all right handed batters, but after all, being right or left handed means nothing in Baseball; the real test occurs above the collar.

Admirers of the Lions are expecting great things of Mike Power, their new backstop, and his discovery has resulted in "Lil' Arthur" playing his old and favourite position of holding down first. Our old friend "Timmy" will also conduct the operations of his pets from this position.

The Wanderers will present a new sunfeller in the person of Mister Cecil J. Hunt. He has been making a good showing in the outer gardens and grabbing the hard ones with unflinching regularity.

"Punky" Brown's old friends will be glad to see him in uniform again to-morrow after an enforced absence from the diamond through illness since the playing season of 1914.

While reading in foreign exchanges of Umpires being busted on the bean with catchers' masks and other crude implements of war, we cannot help wondering what would happen if some player tried to bust Umpire

Prospects Never Brighter Before In the Straits.
The latest fishery reports received by the Board of Trade are: Between Blanc Sablon and Port au Port, including Isle au Bois and Green Island, was received yesterday by the Board of Trade—"The total catch is 1,200 qtrs. Forty-one traps and 94 dories and skiffs are fishing. Prospects are very good and there is plenty of caplin. The lobster catch is poor to date. The ice has disappeared entirely and the oldest inhabitants never saw better weather. The prospects for a good fishery were never brighter."

June 24th. From J. Gosse, (Spencer's Bay to Upper Sablon Cove)—The catch to date is only 30 qtrs. Eleven traps and 21 dories and skiffs are fishing. Prospects are not bright, and very little is being done by boats and liners.

June 24th. From M. J. White (Aquatorte to Caplin Bay)—Prospects are very good with plenty caplin bait and very good fishing was done on trawls this week. The traps are not doing much as the cod holds off with 1,200 for last week. Four whale boats, 48 traps and 75 dories and skiffs are fishing.
