

Remarkable Values in Silk & Cotton Goods

Latest quotations show a steady advance in nearly all Dry Goods, and especially is this advance noticeable in such goods as Silks, Cottons and Mixed Fabrics; and latest advices point to still higher prices. We have on hand a large stock of Silk and Cotton Fabrics which were purchased during the "Slump" in the markets, and we are therefore enabled to offer them at prices much below present values. A careful perusal of these items offered below may be of benefit to you.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

DO YOU KNOW THIS TYPE?
Heaven defend me from the sort of person who prides herself on her frankness! One can forgive the person who is constitutionally frank, who doesn't realize that her way of saying just what she means is anything unusual, or if she does realize it, regrets it and regrets it and regrets it.

RUTH CAMERON

Two Lines No One Need Cross.
There is a line at which the gracious and kindly becomes the insincere and fulsome—there is likewise a line where frankness passes into rudeness. Is there any need of crossing either of these lines?
How is this for a rule—
Never speak anything but the truth, but do not always speak the truth.

This is to certify that fourteen years ago I got the cords of my left wrist nearly severed, and was for about nine months that I had no use of my hand, and tried other Liniments, also doctors, and was receiving no benefit. By a persuasion from a friend I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and used one bottle which completely cured me, and have been using MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family ever since and find it the same as when I first used it, and would never be without it.

Fads and Fashions.

Some of the new blouses are called slip-on kimono, and fall five inches below the waist.
The broad cape or bertha collar is an appropriate finish for a dress of eighteenth century type.
Panels are still at the top of Fashion's list and nothing is more becoming to the stout figure.
Daisies about the crown and velvet streamers down the back make a large flat hat very youthful.
The whole trend of veillings is towards simpler styles—the meshes alone are sufficiently ornamental.
Edges of short sleeves and round necks are prettily finished with bias bands cross stitched in contrasting color.

She Herself Has Wretched Coffee.
Again she sits down to a table where she is a guest (her hostess is a relative, but I do think there are some things we shouldn't say even to relatives) and declares: "My, this is an awfully tough piece of steak. Where do you get your meat?" Her relative told me that the lady herself always had wretched coffee and that she plans next time she goes there to say: "My, this is the poorest cup of coffee I ever drank—where do you buy your coffee?" But I know she won't do it—she isn't that sort. Again, a close friend brings her some butterscotch from a place which has always been noted for its fine butterscotch, and she says tranquilly as she munches it: "B. doesn't make as good butterscotch as he used to." That is perfectly true and not the fault of the buyer, but said at just that moment it does grate.

SEASONABLE SONG.

I like to talk of Christmas time, along in mid-July; I like to speak of cold and rime, snow falling from the sky; I like to tell of Santa Claus, the dearest fake that ever was, the most alluring guy, I seem to see the crowded stores, where eager shoppers swarm, and though outside a tempest roars, in there it's bright and warm; and I behold the weary clerks who cuss old Santa and his works and clamor for reform. And I forget the summer heat, the weather that's a crime, while dreaming of the crowded street at merry Christmas time; I see the wreaths of evergreen, with holly berries strewn between, and hear the glad bells chime. The stormy clouds by winds are rolled across the wintry sky; and tingling shoppers cuss the cold and wish it were July. "Ah, me," they sigh, "how fine would be to sit beneath a steaming tree, and simmer, bake and fry!" I see the children with their sleds upon the gleaming snow; and soon, to divers little beds in ecstasy they'll go, to dream of Kringle and his pack, of reindeer on their shining track, fine presents to bestow. And dreaming thus of Christmas day, the anguish in me dies; if dreams will drive one's grief away, I hold that dreams are wise; and I lock blandly at the sun, and smile a few, and take a gun, and shoot a dozen flies.

The trimmings for Fall are almost crude in color—so positive are they. A buckle of pearl makes a pretty finish for the belt which fastens on the side.
A smart touch is gained by having a black velvet collar or a frock of beige satin.
Very pretty summer hats are trimmed with one large rose and a band of fur.
Dotted Swiss with colored dots makes a charming blouse to wear with a white skirt.
Rather narrow picot-edged ribbon makes the prettiest girdle for a chiffon dress.
Many of the new pockets are so fashioned as to call attention to the broad-hip effect.
Metal embroideries on lawn or organdie are one of the newest features of fashion.

HELPLESS DISBELIEVERS.

Dark are the skies to the faithless, Bitter their hours of grief; Heavy the blow that is struck by woe To the people of no belief.

And nothing that man has said, Having no God to trust, They are tossed about by the winds of doubt

As helpless as grains of dust. They may laugh and sing in their summer And scoff when their skies are fair, But they wither and fade when their games are played

And they come to the touch of care. For nothing that man has whispered And nothing that man has said, Can soften the grief of a disbeliever In the hours when its love lies dead.

Life is but death to the faithless, For never a joy can last; They have none to share in their black despair, Nor a hope when the storm has passed.

They are broken reeds in their sorrow Weak prey to the winds of woe. For they've no belief that can comfort grief, No strength for the bitter blow.

Faith is the light in the darkness, Faith is the promise fair, And none so stout he can do without The strength of an earnest prayer.

For whenever man comes to sorrow And whenever he bows to grief, Let come what will, he can bear it still Sustained by a firm belief.

A Red, White and Blue Fish.

A fish of the golden breed with a red body, white fins and sides and a blue streak on its back, has been produced by Frank W. Hedden, of 47 Gaultier Avenue, Jersey City, a member of the Hudson County Aquarium Society.

Mr. Hedden said he crossed a Chinese Moor-black goldfish with a fish that had a red scaled Japanese and a brown transparent scaled Japanese goldfish for parents.

Mr. Hedden has christened his red, white and blue fish "Miss Liberty."

Nothing could be more simple or charming than the manner of trying a narrow girdle about the waist with a butterfly bow in front.

The Newest 1919 Trench Coats!

The Trench Coats for men we are now showing arrived on the last English boat and are quite the finest Coats we have ever handled. They are the product of a first class English firm, famed for its Military Tailoring, are built of fine quality Gabardine in all shades of Khaki, well-lined with smart-patterned Twill Plaid. Pockets velvet lined. Three very special features in these Coats are: (1) Extra high and well-fitting storm collar; (2) extra wide revers, forming when fastened ample throat and chest protection; (3) an entire interlining of Oilskin, rendering them not only doubly waterproof but absolutely wind and cold proof as well; forming an ideal Coat for all weathers. All Coats are belted and strapped at wrists. All sizes.

PRICE FROM $30.00 UP.
