SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

OH, FOR THE GIFT OF ORDERLINESS.

In the good old story books when a fairy god-mother endowed her mortal child with some virtue by way of a christening gift, she gave the child beauty, or wealth, or courage, or honesty, or some other much-to-be-desired quality. But I don't remember of seeing that any fairy godmother ever gave the gift of orderliness. Yet if the gift were mine to give, I think it would be one of the greatest blessings I could bestow upon a child.

Orderliness not only makes for comfort, and economy of time, and efficiency, but it is such a saving of mental and even physical energy. I was visiting a friend recently who has just had a new cupboard built into her kitchen.

And Everything In Its Place.

"I think," she said, "that that cupboard is going to mark a turning point in my life. I know that sounds extravagant but it's really so. You see I never had room for all my dishes and cooking utensils and supplies before, and when I cleaned up the kitchen after doing any baking I just put things any place that there was a little room and piled them on top of each other and I never could find anything when I wanted it because everything was so muddled up. And how I dreaded washing dishes!"

"When I had that closet built I made up my mind that I should have a place for everything and always keep it there, and really you have no idea what a difference it has made. I can find anything instantly, and when I clean up after baking I slip things into place in a minute and it takes about half the time to wash up the dishes that it used to. I never dread it now, and since I've found out what a difference more order can make in my work, I'm never going to let myself get nervous and tired in the old confused way again."

Disorderliness A Life Handicap.
Said a business man: "I wish that someone had taught me to be orderly when I was a youngster. My mother died when I was very young, and I never was trained to be orderly. You don't know what a handicap it has been to me all the way through my life. I have heard to learn by painful experience just what a lack of system and orderliness can mean to a man and if I had a child I should teach him to be orderly if he never learned anything else."

Why Not Be Your Child's Fairy God-mother.

The old adage tells us that it is never too late to learn, but the learning of this particular trait comes harder the longer it is neglected. The time to start with a child is just as soon as he is old enough to drop his toys on the floor and go off in search of some other amusement. It will take a lot of time for a mother to leave her work and insist that the toys be put away before anything else is done, but it will save hours later on. In order to teach a child to be orderly it must be made a habit with him. And in speaking of a habit a writer on the subject says: "When we are trying to fix habits in a young child we should introduce the desired actions into the child's routine and insist upon their performance on every occasion. Just this once" is the greatest possible enemy to the development of good habits and mothers should learn this and keep it ever in mind."

A strenuous task for the mother, but it brings a result worth every bit of the tireless following up involved and one that will be of untold comfort to the mother herself in years to come as well as to the child.

THE MORNING AFTER.

Off I hear the scofflaw's laughter, where the lights are glowing red; but alas, the morning after, when the garish hours are sped! Then his heart is wildly thumping, and his harried nerves are jump, and we see him sadly pumping ice cold water on his head. Off the scofflaw's pass my cottage as the evening fades and dies, where I have by patient swatting killed about a million flies; and they say to me, "old chap, come with us and let's be happy; let us make the long night snappy, pouring down synthetic ryes." But I ply my jeweled swatter, and I mutter, "Not for me! I have drunk nine quarts of water and a pannikin of tea; all such beakers you are scornful, but I give you solemn warning that when comes the pallid morn'g you a ghastly weird will greet. Oh, the night is soft and mellow, and you are a joyous crew; but the morning taste is yellow when it isn't green or blue; in the morning when you're waking all your ragged nerves are quaking, wearily your heads are aching, till you think they'll split in two. Now your mirth will shake the rafters for two noisy hours or four; but alas, the morning after, it is waiting evermore; stay with me and drink a flagon from my cistern; get a jag on from the good old water wagon that is standing at the door."

Just Folks.

CITY-WEARY.
Come, let's get out of here! Out of the din of it.
Out of the bickering, out of the sin of it.
Out of the smoke of it, out of the noise of it.
Out of the pitiful, lean, leering joys of it.
Come on! Let's go
To a hill top I know.
Where the air is washed clean,
And the trees are a gleam
With the gold of the sun,
And there's naught to be done
Save to lie there and look
At life's beauties and dream.

Come, let's get out of here! Out of the stress of it.
Out of the paint and the powder and dress of it.
Out of the cry at the loss or the gain of it.
Out of the hurt and the grief and the pain of it.
Let's slip away
To the fields for a day,
Where there is nothing
On counters and shelves,
Nothing to strive for,
To work contrive for,
Let's leave the city,
And just be ourselves.

Come, let's get out of here! Out of the crush of it.
Out of the bedlam and out of the rush of it.
Out of the sham of it, out of the heat of it.
Out of the withering, scornful conceit of it.
Come on! Let's go
Where the clean breezes blow,
Out where the splendours
Are all that they seem;
Let's merely walk a-while,
Ponder and talk awhile,
Owing our souls
The full sweep of a dream.

Punishment of Crime

JUDGE SUGGESTS IT SHOULD BE SHORT AND SHARP.

Short but sharp punishment, in the opinion of Mr. Justice Greer, is the best deterrent in dealing with crime. Addressing the grand jury at Notingham Assizes, he mentioned that he had just read extracts from an Assize calendar of less than 100 years

Sentenced to death and executed for arson.
For stealing bread and cheese, sentenced to death, but transported for life.

For stealing a tinder box, sentenced to death, but commuted to 24 years' hard labor.

We had travelled a long way in the treatment of crime since then, but it was still necessary—and he supposed it always would be—that provision should be made for the punishment of crime. Now, however, there was a tendency to go to the other extreme, whereas the truth usually lay halfway between extremes. As long as human nature was what it was, punishment would be, to some extent, a deterrent, but he entirely agreed with the modern policy of never sending a first offender to prison if it could be avoided—especially if the offender were young. There were certain offences that could not be treated in that way. He agreed with what he had been told by a responsible prison official, that if punishment had to be given it should be felt, and that it should not be regarded as some form of reward. His effect had to be on the offender, not only upon the offender, but upon other people. Unfortunately the law provided practically no means of punishing criminals except by sending them to prison, and in exceptional cases for long terms, the result being that they had to be kept for a long time at great expense to the country, doing no useful work. He would like to see the law altered in
