Lordly Obstructionists.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—In a speech at Derby Sir William Vernon Harcourt attacked the House of Lords as a standing obstruction to useful legislation. He said that as a deliberative assembly the House of Lords had almost ceased to exist. It had done nothing during the present session beyond promoting a bill to preserve hares and an extension of the game laws, which were already extensive enough. What great Liberal measure had not during the present century been delayed, thwarted and defeated in the House of Lords? The country ought to keep in mind the fact of the antagonism be-House of Lords? The country ought to keep in mind the fact of the antagonism be tween the reactionary Upper House an the Liberal House of Commons. That wa the great political question of the day.
