A wave of color shot up to Arthur Aspinwall's forehead at her words. There was a moment of awkward silence; then he admitted with a halfdefiant, half-humble air:

"I confess I was wretchedly jealous of him, Margie." Margaret's eyes began to burn with an ominous light, but she made no re-

"I could not help it," he went on, encouraged by her silence. "I-I had cared for you all my life, and I could not be reconciled to the fact he should win your favor so easily when I had failed so utterly after so many years of devotion." The girl's golden-fringed lids drooped over her lustrous eyes, which were every moment growing brighter and brighter, while a spot of fire now glowed on either cheek.

"But," Arthur continued, growing bolder as he found the ice so easily broken, "I am not destitute of feeling, Margie; I have not been insensible to your misery, and I am, believe me, sincerely sorry for you," he concluded. with a tender inflection.

She shivered slightly, and drew nearer to the fire, as if she felt cold, while her face suddenly grew deadly white again.

They were silent for several minutes, during which the young man watched her with a troubled expres-

Suddenly she turned toward him, with a swift, impulsive movement.
"Arthur, do you hear anything said she asked. "About-Dunbar?"

'Yes. "Not much. Now and then the fellows at the club mention him; but, like all other mysteries, and unsatistopics, it has gradually been What is your theory regarding his disappearance? you have never told me," she questioned, leaning toward him, and reading his face with search-He moved uneasily in his chair. He gianced into her eager face, and wondered at the strange expression that rested upon it, and he, too, grew a trifle pale as he replied: "I do not like to tell you, Margie."

"Why not?" "Because - because-good gracious! you have told me never to say it again; but you tempt me beyond my strength-because, Margie, I still love you too well to want to hurt you in any way. The hot, crimson tide leaped up to the young girl's waxen ' neck throat; and then up, up it surged and rushed until it dyed her whole face with scarlet. Controlling her emotions after a few moments, she said, in a calm tone:

"I have been hurt all that I can be already; tell me your theory." He regarded her uneasily.

'I thought at first that he had became the victim of foul play," he said You thought so at first? Have you changed your opinion?" "I am obliged to confess that I

"What has caused you to do so?" "The fact that the detectives have not obtained the slightest clue to anything of the kind. These French detectives are very keen, nothing tangible escapes them, and if Louis Dunbar has been mur-made away with, they would have get hold of something pointing to such a crime before this. "Then you do not believe he has been-A shudder completed the sentence which her lips could not finish. "No, Margie," he answered gently.

"What, then, can have become of Arthur was silent.

'Tell me," she commanded peremp-"How can I, Margie? Why will you compel me to be cruel to you!" he asked, tenderly.

She shrugged her shoulders impatiently. She lifted her head with something of her old haughty, imperious grace.

"I will know. Tell me what you think has become of Louis," she in-Well, if I must, remember I do so under protest.' He paused as if reluctant to go on even then. She lifted her great eyes, and waited for the answer.

"I am forced to believe," he said deliberately, though with downcast eyes, "that he disappeared of his own ac-

CHAPTER XXII.

Margaret Houghton never moved as Arthur Aspinwall uttered those significant words. They did not appear

Her face was unfathomable in its expression; her eyes were downcast, and there was not so much as the flutter of an eyelid to show that she experienced the least emotion at the suggestion of her lover's dishonesty.

But if the young man could have seen her hands he would have noticed that they were locked in a strained, convulsive clasp. He had expected that she would in dignantly repudiate the idea that he

That she did not cause him considerable surprise, while at the same time it created a feeling of secret joy. If could only instill into her mind a belief that Louis was a villain and a robber, it would be comparatively easy to win her thoughts from him, and gradually lead her to look more favorably upon himself. "Do I understand you to believe that Mr. Dunbar stole that money and absconded with it?"

The voice was hollow, almost unearthly; but otherwise Margaret gave no sign of emotion. "That is putting it in very plain,  disagreeable terms," Arthur replied, gently; "but I cannot help thinking so. In the first place, no one, save him and the cashler knew anything about the money having been in the office. Second, no one but they had a key to the safe. The cashier produced his next morning; Dunbar's was in the lock.

"But someone may have assaulted and overpowered him-stolen his key, and then taken the money," interrupted Margaret.

"There would have been some evidence of it, then; there would have been a struggle for the possession of the key; in that case there must have been some disorder and signs of it. In fondest joy and love of heart If he had been felled and killed instantly, as your father believes, the body would have had to be taken care of, and the detectives would have traced it before this."

Again Margaret shivered and drew nearer the fire. It was dreadful to hear Louis spoken of as a "body." "I told you I should hurt you; I cannot bear to wound you, Margie, Arthur said, in unsteady tones, as he

She made no reply, but sat a long time silent; so long that the stillness became oppressive to her companion. At last he could bear it no longer. and, rising, he crossed over to where she sat. "Forgive me," he said, in a low, earnest tone. "I feared this would open your wound afresh, and I would rather suffer torture than give you

"You need not feel at all consciencesmitten-for this-I questioned you-if I suffer I alone am to blame."

There was a peculiar significance in the construction and emphasis in the first half of her reply that made him very uncomfortable. What did she

"I am going now," he said, after a moment. "I feel like an intruder here; you do not receive me very graciously, Margie. Would you rather I stayed away altogether?" 'No," she at last said, slowly, but without lifting her eyes. "I think I should miss you if you did not come at all; but, Arthur, if you continue your visits, you must not talk of love to me any more; I cannot bear that." His face lighted eagerly in spite of that last prohibition, and his heart bounded within him.

She had said that she would miss him if he did not come at all; she had given him permission to visit her, with only one restriction. He felt almost sure now that he should win her in time. All he needed was patience and perseverance. Ah! if this beautiful girl would only become his wife, and he could have the handling of her gold, also, there would be nothing more to ask for in this

"Thank you," he said, and his voice trembled, in spite of his effort to prevent it, with hope. "Then I shall come every day until you send me away; and now good-bye for this time.'

He held out his hand as he spoke. She could not help seeing it, but she hesitated a moment, and shrank slightly from him; then, with a sudden movement, she laid hers for an instant in his palm.

It was like a piece of ice-so cold that it actually chilled him. "How cold you are,' he cried. "Margie, your hand could not be colder if you were dead."

"No, nor my heart, either," she bitterly; and turning abruptly from him, she motioned for him to

When Margaret heard the door close after him she sprang from her chair and began to pace wildly up and down the room; her hands were clasped upon her breast, her face raised heavenward, while the tears fell like rain over her wan cheeks.

Her mother found her thus, a little while after, when she came down from her own room.

"My darling," she said, going to her and taking her tenderly into her arms, "you must not allow yourself to become so unnerved and excited. I know your heart is nearly broken, and we suffer with you, Margie; but, my child, do not forget that our anguish would be a hundredfold more poignant if we should lose you, our only one.'

Margaret paused in her rapid walk, slipped her arms about her mother's waist, and laid her head wearily upon her shoulder. For nearly five minutes she stood thus, then she raised her face and tried to smile—oh, such a pitiful smile: "I am a great deal of trouble to you, mamma," she said, humbly; "but I will try not to grieve you like this agair. Let us go out and drive for a little while; go in the close carriage. I imagine the cool air will do me good." Mrs. Houghton was astonished at this request. No amount of urging heretofore had prevailed upon her to go out. Not once had she stepped outside the door since the dreadful blow fell, and now she was asking to go and drive.

She gave her no time to change her mind. In fifteen minutes they were driving in the brilliant sunshine out toward the Champs Elysees.

It did her much good. She came home brighter and more cheerful. There was no more color in her face than usual; but that look of blank misery was softened, the tones of her voice were less strained and unnatural, while there was an expression of thoughtfulness and resolve upon her countenance that told of some new purpose formed within her heart. Mr. Houghton was greatly gratified upon learning of this new departure. It was a good beginning, and, now that the ice was broken, he resolved that he would find something interesting for her outside every day. Arthur came again the next morning, and he also noticed the change in Mangaret.

She was less reserved than usual, joining more freely in conversation than, she had yet done, and even smiled slightly once at some pleasantry between himself and Mrs. Houghton. That lady informed him that they were going for a drive on the boulevard at two, and invited hem to accompany

[To be Continued.]

If you want your Shirt Waists and your Linen to look JUST RIGHT you must use the proper Starch. Try

AROUND THE LAMP

GOD'S CHOICEST GIFT.

God thought to give the sweetest thing In His Almighty power To earth; and deeply pondering What it should be, one hour, Outweighing every other, He moved the gates of heaven apart And gave to earth a mother."

CARD CASE AND PURSE.

Card case and purse are no longer combined for my lady's convenience, fall importations presenting them distinct appointments of the feminine toilet. Both are made from suede in rather dull shades of brown, gray, or pale buff. The pocketbook is small, business-like, and durable in appearance, while the card case is medium oblong in size and shape and lined with delicate or bright colors in watered silk. Many of them are metal or jewel studded at the corners and others are finished with a button-hole and pearl or coral button as fastening.

IN THE NURSERY. A thermometer is almost indispensable in the nursery. It should, if possible, hang in the middle of the room, away from the door, window, wall, and fireplace, where the mercury may be affected by the draught. If the room where the baby is obliged to sleep is very hot in the middle of the day or at night, hang a wet sheet over the window and leave the door open. Sprinkle the sheet as it dries with a whiskbroom that has been dipped in cold water.

CARE OF THE TEETH.

Inattention to the teeth often results in headaches and stomach disorders and there are pains of the teeth which on the other hand can be traced to stomatitis or some other disordered condition of the digestive apparatus. Women especially are susceptible to toothache from remote causes and during the entrance into womanhood especially there appear sometimes pains in the teeth which may be found periodic. Proper care of the teeth includes vigorous brushing at least once a day, preferably in the morning, before of all food particles after each meal with a toothpick. The quill pick is the best because, being soft, it is less likely to mar the enamel. Cold water and a little pure castile soap make a simple and effective dentifrice.

OYSTER INFECTION.

of these bivalves by sewage are again help retain the color. pointed out in a recent number of the British Medical Journal. "The oyster tom and the stems of seaweeds). Ty markets of Paris, according to phoid fever germs have been found Backer und Konditor-Zeitung: "At phoid fever have been traced to the use of infected oysters. It would seem much safer and wiser to vave the oyster to attend to its by ness as a scavenger of the sea, insead of terminating its usefulness to swallowing it, alive and kicking, gerns and all."

NEW PERFUME.

Carnation pink p a comparatively new perfume, but t is running the violet a close race for favor. The odor is faintly suggestive of a garden of pinks.

CARF OF THE EYES. "The large number of spectacled adults seen everywhere at the present time indicates that some common and far-reaching cause is at work to produce deective vision," says Dr. Eliza M. Mosher in the Interchange. "It is not needful to go beyond the home and the strained juice of two lemons, and the school to find this cause. Insuffi- add the carefully grated yellow rind cient nourishment during the years of grewth and development, bad air in granulated sugar to heat until the sleeping rooms and schoolrooms, the sugar spins a fine thread, remove from use of the eyes with the light directly the fire and stir into it the juice of a front of them in study at home, hanging the head over books, and thus Strain, put on ice until very cold, and producing more or less passive congestion of the eye region; overuse in near work and failure to rest the eyes by often fixing them upon objects for distant; bad postures in school-these and many other conditions which affect children unfavorably during school life appear to be predisposing causes of eye defects. All these might be changed if parents and teachers and those build and equip schoolhouses would work together with that object in view. The eyes of school children should be tested from time to time to ascertain their conditions and needs." A SUMMER CAPE.

A jaunty cape seen recently was of corn yellow brocaded silk, completely covered with narrow ruffles of black tulle, ribbon edged. The collar was high and flaring and covered with chiffon closely shirred, edged by narrow ruching. From the fastening at the throat fell two long scarf ends of accordion-plaited chiffon under a large bow of corn yellow tulle.

FOR INVALIDS.

Invalids the world over are given their bread in the form of toast, and there are many persons ignorant of why this is done. It is because toasting bread until it becomes brown largely converts the starch into dextrine. It will be found that the thinner the slices of bread and the more thoroughly they are toasted - not burned, but still changed to a deep brown color-it will be found to be still more easily digested than ordinary

CUCUMBER AND CRESS SAND-WICHES.

Cut some cucumbers into very thin slices, sprinkle a little salt over them, and place them on a clean cloth for about ten or fifteen minutes before using them. Cut some thin slices of bread and butter from a sandwich loaf; arrange the pieces of cucumber on some of the slices, then cover them with small cress from which the stalks just enough have been removed, and close the sandwiches with another slices of bread omit a pinch of salt in both pudding and butter, and with a sharp knife cut and sauce. them into narrow fingers or squares.

THE WOMEN OF CHINA. The important work of woman, we believe, is in the home. This does not mean that we think women are fit only to do housework. On the con-trary, most of our housework is done by men. Among foreigners who have experience in our country, it is a say-ing that the Chinese cook is second only to the French, and the Chinese houseservant is second only to the German servingman. The work of woman among us is to bear children, and it is desired that she shall be free from the burden of toil, so that she may have time and strength to rear her family well and to make her home happy. The Chinese mother is most anxious for the welfare of her children, watching them with great care as they grow up. She attends to the education of the daughters, and the father directs the education of the sons. The family tie is very strong among my people, and the love and attention which parents give to the bringing up of children is equaled only by the veneration respect which children show toward their parents. This family love is part of the nature, the religion, the history, the tradition of China.-Mme. Wu, in Harper's Bazar.

THE HAPPY LIFE. How happy is he born and taught That serveth not another's will, Whose armor is his honest thought

Who God doth late and early pray More of his grace than gifts to lend, And entertains the harmless day With a well-chosen book or friend.

And simple truth his utmost skill!

This man is freed from servile bands Of hope to rise or fear to fall-Lord of himself, though not of lands; And, having nothing, yet hath all. -Sir Henry Watton.

TIPPING THE HAT.

When a knight of old entered a com-indicate that he considered himself among friends, and that there was no need to protect himself. This practice has survived in the custom of raising the hat when saluting a lady.

CARROTS GOOD FOR THE COM-PLEXION.

have been regarded as a moderately useful but not especially nteresting product of nature, but suddenly they have acquired a prominmorning, they are said to produce a nain and eves of the devotee. It is asserted that in-six months the most fadpreferably in the morning, before ea and "eluerly" complexion will have breakfast and the careful extraction become fresh and youthful. Why not a and find in this hygienic discovery a for a new occupation for women? A carrot farm ought to pay, when once the value of the vegetable as a cos- In hand, as jockeys hold their prancmetic is understood.

COOKERY HINT.

A few drops of lemon juice squeezed The dangers involved in the use of into the water in which salsify, celery It shall be pure-most free of fraud pysters and the clams due to infection and other vegetables are cooked will TESTING EGGS.

lives upon diatoms (bacteria obtained the formwirs method for determining from the slime covering the sea bot- the age of eggs is practiced in the Backer und Konditor-Zeitung: "About Do thou today the kindness nearest both in the oyster juice and in ody stomach and other portions of the of the oyster. Many epidemies typhoid fever have been traced to the solution an agg is dropped into the solution and agg is dropped solution an egg is dropped into the And end a day of duties changed to glass. If the egg is only one day old it immediately sinks any older it does not reach the bottom of the glass. If three days old it sinks only just below the surface. From five days upward it floats; the older it is If you've any task to do the more it protrudes out of the water. Let me whisper, friend, to you.

CAULIFLOWER OMELET. Take the white part of a boiled cauliflower after it is cold, chop it very small, and mix with a sufficient quantity of well-beaten egg to make a very thick batter, fry in fresh butter and send to table.

MINT CORDIAL. Crush a bunch of mint by rubbing each leaf with a wooden masher, pull in bits, then soak for half an hour in large orange and the lemon and mint. serve in wine glasses.

CORN PUDDING To a pint of corn pulp add a pint of milk, stir in the well-beaten yokes of four eggs, a teaspoonful of salt, pepper to taste. Mix thoroughly. Lastly add the stiffened whites and bake moderate oven in a greased dish for one hour. A delicious accompaniment

CORN OYSTERS.

To a pint of corn, prepared as above, add the well-beaten yolks of two eggs, two large tablespoonfuls of flour, half a teaspoonful of salt, a hint of cayenne and black pepper. Mix well, and when the fat for frying is ready add the stiffened whites. Drop, in oyster shape, from a spoon into the hot fat, brown on both sides and serve hot in the vegetable course. Very good.

FRUIT SPONGE.

To use up odds and ends of fruit, ripe and good, but not fresh looking enough to serve whole, a sponge is the very thing. Wash the fruit, and half a cup of water, stew for a few moments, then squeeze through cheese cloth until a pint measure is filled. Soak half a box of gelatine in a cup of cold water for five | linutes, add half a cup of sugar, now stir into this the fruit Juice, boiling lot, pour into a shallow tin dish and when cooled a little place this is another of cracked ice and salt. When this begins to thicken stir occasionally and add the stiffened whites of four eggs, all will now be light and "spongy" and must be put on the ice to harden.

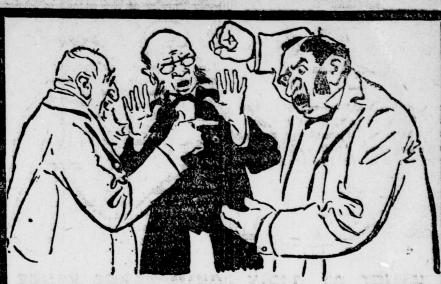

Serve with a custard made from the yolks of the eggs. Fruit juices brought to boiling point, two small tablespoonfuls of starch, mixed smooth with a little cold juice, half a cup of sugar added, and the whole cooked for five minutes is delicious when allowed to become cold

Care must be taken to thicken only just enough to hold together. Serve with whipped or plain cream and never you have constant headaches, are ner vous and sleepless at night and feel tired in the morning? Your blood isn't carrying the right materials to your nerves and other organs. Begin taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood enricher, and you will soon realize a change. You will feel better and stronger, will relish your food and enjoy refreshing sleep.

Can You Tell Why

Nausea, indigestion are cured by Hood's Pills,

TRULY GREAT MINDS YIELD TO TRUTH.

No matter how doctors differ, the best of them yield to the fact that DR. HAMMOND-HALL'S ENGLISH TEETHING SYRUP

Is the best, safest, most reliable remedy for Painful Teething, Gum Rash, Hives, Infantile Diarrheea, and all troubles incident to the period of "Cutting Teeth." NO ALCOHOL. NO OPIATE, NO NARCOTIC. As pleasant as honey and without hurtful sugar ferment, as found too frequently in soothing mixtures and powders.

DR. HAMMOND-HALL'S ENCLISH TEETHING SYRUP

COMFORTS CRYING CHILDREN, PREVENTS CHOLERA-ENFANTUM. PRICE 25 CENTS, AT DRUGGISTS. BRITISH CHEMISTS COMPANY, LONDON, ENG., NEW YORK, TORONTO.

0000000000000 The Poets.

92.-128.

Success.

We prate of progress in these latter But, pray, in what does progress real consist. Except it be that more of perfect good.

Or universal benefaction be Made common to the human family? And, too, we roll the word success beneath The tongue with gusto. What may be success? Is it to purchase freemen at the polls Like cattle in the shambles, thus to gain. By bribe and misdemeanor, place and power? Is it to horde ill-gotten gains or spoils Until command of millions may be held

And thus to wield a power most dangerous? A score may not be named success unor guile, ing steeds.

And bring some good unto mankind. There is A God, and life is endless. Souls may grow In love and live in light, and only that Is fully worthy to be named success.

thee And rest content when rest shall close around

-Lyman W. Denton.

Do What You Feel You Should.

Do it. If you've any thing to say, True and needed, yea or nay, Say it.

If you've anything to love, As a blessing from above, Love it.

If you've anything to give, That another's joy may live, Give it. If some hollow creed you doubt,

Though the whole world hoot and shout, Doubt it. If you've any debt to pay, Rest you neither night nor day. Pay it. If you've any joy to hold, Near your heart, lest it grow cold, Hold it.

If you've any grief to meet. At a loving father's feet, Meet it.

If you know what torch to light, Guiding others in the night, Light it.

The Homes of the Toilers. Here dwell the toilers, dingy block on block Of houses like as kernels round a stalk: So many windows, doors; such space of brick; Two steps and then the street-one's heart grows sick! All day within the mills the roar of wheels,

Dizzily sliding belts and buzzing

Then home, so weary that the way is dim. And the brick desert seems to whirl and swim: But home-yes, home, despite its meagerness, With wife and babe and hearthside cheer to bless. Yea, when the light shines out, what Before the feet of him who wanders past!

What recks the outward, if by love's clear blaze Is crowned the inner altar that we raise? These humble walls that shelter human hearts Need no distinction save what love im-The magic name of "Home" shall ever Their badge of beauty and of dignity. And wheresoe'er the toiler shall abide.

With peace and love to bless his ingleside. There homeless wealth may fitly crave a place, And art a finer charm than beauty's -James Buckham in Catholic World

PAIN-KILLER is the best, safest and surest remedy for cramps, colliand diarrhea. As a liniment for wounds and sprains it is unequaled. substitutes, there's but one Pain-Killer, Perry Davis'. 25c and 50c. xt The penal code of the Chinese Empire is at least 2,000 years old, and under its provisions about 12,000 persons are an-Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, etc.

McGILL UNIVERSITY, Montreal,

SESSION 1900-1901.

Matriculation Examinations, preliminary to the various Courses of Study, will be held at Montreal and at local centers on 11th June and at Montreal in September, as under: *Factulty of Arts (Men and)

Faculty of Applied Science | Mon.17th Sept Faculty of Medicine..... Faculty of Law..... Faculty of Comparative Medicine and Veterinary Science, Saturday 22nd Sept.

Veterinary Science, Saturday 22nd Sept.

*In the Faculty of Arts (Revised Curriculum) the courses are open also to Partial Students without Matriculation.

†In the Faculty of Applied Science the courses in Civil, Mechanical, Electrical and Mining Engineering, Chemistry and Architecture, are also open to Partial Students without Matriculation.

Examinations for twenty-one First Year Entrance Exhibitions in the Faculty of Arts.

Entrance Exhibitions in the Faculty of Arts, ranging from $90 to $200, will be held on the 17th September, at Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, Kingston and other centers.
The Royal Victoria College, the new residential college for women, will be ready to receive students on 17th September.
The McGill Normal School will be reopened on 1st September. Particulars of examinations, and copies of the calendar, containing full information, may be obtained on application to W. VAUGHAN, Registrar.

For INFAM'S and ANVALIDE

"Very carefully prepared and highly nuri tious."—LANCET. "Equally suitable to Invalids and Old People.

NEAVE'S FOOD has for some time been used ?

THE RUSSIAN IMPERIAL FAMILY

"Admirably adapted to the wants o Infants and Young Persons." SIR CHARLES A. CAMERON, M.D.

Wholesale Agents in Canada: THE TORONTO PHARMACAL CO. Manufacturers: JOSIAH R. NEAVE & CO. Fordingbridge, England.

DUSINESS DIRECTORY.

Ready Reference Guide of London-Banks, Wholesale Dealers and Manufacturers.

Auction Mart, Storage and Moving PORTER & CO., 'phone 1,162.

DOMINION SAVINGS AND INVEST-MENT SOCIETY. CANADIAN SAVINGS AND LOAN.

Brushes.

THOMAS BRYAN, 61 Dundas street.

Banks.

Building and Loan Companies. BIRKBECK LOAN CO., 169 Dundas.

Dyers and Cleaners. STOCKWELL'S, 259 Dundas street.

Drygoods. ROBINSON, LITTLE & CO., 343 Rich.

Hats and Caps. FRASER, McMILLAN & CO., Rich'd.

Hardware. HOBBS HARDWARE CO., 339 Rich. Iron, Brass and Wire Works.

DENNIS WIRE & IRON CO., King. Insurance.

NORTHERN LIFE, Hiscox Building.

LONDON BOX MFG. & LUMBER CO (Limited). Tea Importers.

MARSHALL BROS. & CO., 67 Dundas.

Lumber Boxes.

Wholesale Grocers.

A. M. SMITH & CO., 176 York street ELLIOTT, MARR & CO. 233 Rich