THE RAILWAY PROBLEM.

THE RAILWAY PROBLEM.

The Solution a Satisfactory One—Explanation of the Transaction.

"The solution of the London and Port Stanley Railway problem is the best that could be arrived at," said a gentleman this morning who was largely instrumental in effecting it. "The city of London buys up the first mortgage bonds held by St. Thomas to the amount of something over $38,000. St. Thomas therefore throw up all its interest in the road and has no voice in its management; but that city is protected just as well by the General Railway Act, against any discrimination on the part of London as if it had retained its part ownership in the L. and P. Re Feel Ever Rede a "Quadrant,"
A word to the wise is sufficient. Now, we don't pretend that everyone is wise, for unfortunately we know many fools; still there is a vast difference in fools, and, personally, we would rather deal with a young fool than an old fool any time. But we don't wish to deal with either, and so young fool than an old fool any time. But we don't wish to deal with either, and so far as our patrons are concerned we know we never shall. Flattery? Not a bit of it. They know a good thing when they see it; that's why they come to us. No fool ever rode a "Quadrant" yet, and no fool ever will. It's an impossibility. The fact of them riding this wheel is proof positive of their wisdom. See? Now don't be fooled. Come to us! We say this with all sincerity of purpose, and we will give you honest value for every dollar you spend. The "Quadrant" is a magnificent machine. That it has no superiors we assert positively, and back our assert in with a year's guarantee. Remember we make a specialty of changing tires, and in fact all kinds of repairing. J. D.
