HOW IS A MAN JUDGED?

J. Pierpont Morgan was once asked the question. I never look a man up, I look him over.

Stop and think what these words mean.

Simply that one of the greatest business men
the world has ever known attached tremendous importance to a man's personal appearance.

If you could stand before J. P. Morgan today for his verdict, what would it be.

Let the mirror tell the truth.

MISSING GIRL DRESSED AS BOY

Even Her Mother Failed to Recognize Her—Worked as Caddy.

After having masqueraded as a boy since her disappearance from her home at 88 Develon Avenue, Brooklyn, Oct. 12, caddied innumerable rounds on the public golf links at Forest Park, and slept in a Y. M. C. A. men's lodging house, Julia Hamigan, 15-year-old Brooklyn high school girl, was found at Broadway and Rodney Street, a few days ago, by Detective George L. O'Connor, of the Missing Persons Bureau, only a few blocks from her home.

Julia, her last fifteen cents spent for coffee and rolls and a newspaper, was leaning against a pole reading the story of her adventure when Detective O'Connor accosted her. She was dressed in brown trousers, heavy brogans, a brown sweater and a felt hat, and, according to O'Connor, easily could have avoided detection.

In fact, her disguise was so good that when the detective took the girl to her home, her mother failed to recognize her.

Detective O'Connor took the girl to Manhattan Police Headquarters where she told her story to Captain Ayres, of the Missing Persons Bureau.

"I always wanted to be a boy," she said. "I wanted the freedom that boys have."

"How do you feel about it now?" asked Captain Ayres.

"I'm glad you found me," she replied. "I'm glad to be a girl again."

Being a boy isn't what it's cracked up to be.

Julia told the captain she had read the stories of the disappearance of Franklin Roosevelt, who left his home in the upper west side of Manhattan, a few weeks ago, and was stimulated to dreams about his exploits. She saved the money her mother gave her for the "movies" and didn't spend as much on candy as before. She bought the shoes, a boy's hat, trousers and underwear with this money. The sweater, shirt, collar and tie were obtained from her mother's wardrobe.

On the morning of October 12 Julia made ready for her venture. She put her clothes in the cellar of her home. That night she came back and, doffing her skirt, put on the boy's clothes and plastered her hair back. Her own clothing she hid in a bin.

That night she went to the Y. M. C. A. at South Ninth Street and Marcy Avenue. There was no difficulty in obtaining a room. The next morning she went to Forest Park. She needed to replenish her funds, and caddied looked easy. She carried clubs for golfers for eight days.

The other youngsters at the links suspected nothing, nor did the golfers. The second night after her departure, Julia took a room in a men's lodging house at 302 Bedford Avenue, only a short distance from her home. She got a small room, for which she paid $1.50 a week. All the other lodgers were men. That night she had her hair cut short.

At night, Julia sat around the table with the fellow roomers, "longshoremen, teamsters, and checkers on the docks, and read the newspaper stories about herself and talked with the men. Once she tried to smoke a cigarette.

"But it made me sick," she said, "so I stopped."

After a week the caddying proved too unremunerative for a livelihood. She was conscience-stricken over her parents' worry because of her. When the read that they feared she had been murdered she called her home on the telephone. That was Monday night. But after informing her mother that she was safe, she hung up the receiver and went to bed.

Yesterday, however, she found her self with only 25 cents, she decided that she had had enough of being a boy. She called Detective O'Connor at the Missing Persons Bureau.

"I'm tired and hungry," she told him, and asked: "If I come back will you arrest me?"

O'Connor arranged to meet her at the Broadway Phonograph Shop, 232 South Fourth Street. When he went there the proprietor told him no girl had been in the store, but a boy had left a note. This directed O'Connor to Broadway and Rodney Street.

There he found Julia.

TIMES MANAGER LUNCHEON HOST

Sir Campbell Stuart Entertains
Notable Gathering at Versailles

Palace of Versailles, Oct. 28—Rarely has there been such enthusiasm as marked the foundation of the Canadian History Society of France at the luncheon promoted by Sir Campbell Stuart from President Doumergue, of the chateau specially lent by the French Government for the memorable occasion. The tables were named after Franco-Canadian celebrities; Champlain, Jacques-Cartier and Montcalm. Authentic tapestries on which walked Louis XIV. and Cardinal Richelieu were hung around. The Duke of Connaught, president of a similar society already founded in England, replied simply but strikingly to messages received by Sir Campbell Stuart from President Doumergue, of the chateau specially lent by the French Government for the memorable occasion.

All idea that there could be any rivalry for the affection of Canada, for sitting side by side were representatives of British families closely connected with Canada and survivors of French families which played a part in the discovery and development of the country.

The letter, which was signed by Edward A. Carlson, 1403 Real Estate Building, Philadelphia, urged scout masters to keep all their publicity matter for McHenry, and give him the same upon his visit to them. In his pockets were a cheap watch, $47 in cash and a railroad ticket to Philadelphia. The place at which his body was found is two miles from any habitation and equally distant from the Susquehanna trail. The discovery was made by members of a hunting club, who were inspecting their lands.

SNOW STORM RAGED

IN TEMISKAMING

Heavy Wet Snow Fell to Depth of Six Inches in Some Places, Including Cobalt Area Say Reports to North Bay

North Bay, Ont., Oct. 7—Reports trickling in from various parts of Temiskaming to-day indicate that considerable damage was done by Wednesday's snow-storm. Heavy wet snow fell to a depth of six inches in some places, including the Cobalt area. Many farmers who had not taken in their grain had it flattened by snow which, however, disappeared within twenty-four hours.

The great majority of Temiskaming telephone lines are out of commission, having broken under the strain of the snow clinging to them. In Milberta section, several roads are blocked by trees broken down by the weight of the snow.

Resultful Indian summer weather has been experienced by the North for the past few days.

MAN'S BODY WAS CHAINED TO TREE

Philadelphia Dead Two Months
—Had 150—Foot Radius to Move In.

The body of a man identified by cards in his pocket as Henry Handy McHenry, of Philadelphia, was found recently by hunters chained to a tree in the thickest part of Green Mountain, six miles from Trout Run. The man had been dead about two months from last appearances. The chain had been wrapped around the tree and then locked by a loop around his neck. It was 150 feet long, which permitted the man to walk and crawl in a circle around the tree in his queer prison. The ground in a circle around the tree was beaten with the man's footsteps.

The body was well dressed in a palm beach suit, brown shoes, silk stockings and cap.

State policeman, city officers and county authorities together with citizens have been searching for hours late to-day in an effort to get a clue to unravel the mystery.

In McHenry's pockets were found a number of name cards, a card number membership in the Ardmore Country Club and the Central Branch Y. M. C. A.

In addition was found a letter introducing the bearer, McHenry, to the scout masters of Delaware and Montgomery counties as a part time publicity man.

The letter, which was signed by Edward A. Carlson, 1403 Real Estate Building, Philadelphia, urged scout masters to keep all their publicity matter for McHenry, and give him the same upon his visit to them.

In his pockets were a cheap watch, $47 in cash and a railroad ticket to Philadelphia. The place at which his body was found is two miles from any habitation and equally distant from the Susquehanna trail. The discovery was made by members of a hunting club, who were inspecting their lands.

FISHERMEN FINED IN FIRE LOSS

Neglect to Put Out Camp Fire
Which Spread to Nearby
Forest

The impression which some persons have that fishing parties which cause forest fires cannot be traced or identified and so invariably escape punishment, received a severe setback on the 17th., when Magistrate Comben of Woodstock convicted four anglers. The fine of twenty dollars and costs was imposed on each but what was more important, the costs of extinguishing the fire started by the party were added to the fines. The costs amounted to $119.31 and the total makes the expense of a piece of carelessness or of deliberate foolhardiness enough to make the members of the party remember.

The fire which caused the prosecution and the penalty named occurred on the Twelfth of July. The value of the registration certificate for woods travel was proven for the four anglers obtained their permits. They did not, however, extinguish the fire which they started as they should have by the terms of the certificate.

A prompt report to a Fire Warden and hard work by residents of the locality and two mill crews aided by a forest-fire pump, prevented a blaze from spreading over a great area. It was on the Northwest Branch of the southwest Miramichi above Juniper.

The Law provides a maximum penalty of 200 for leaving a fire burning in the forest, with costs, or nine months jail. This is the first instance of culpable being required to meet the costs of extinguishing a fire but it is not likely to be the last if any similar offence is discovered.

FIND BOY DIED OF
BLOOD POISONING

Inquest in Twelve-Year-Old Lad Whom Operates School Teachers Whom
Parents Blamed For Alleged
Ill-treatment.

Gloucester, N. S. Nov. 2—The inquest on Silas Muford, 12-year-old school boy of New Aberdeen, whose death his father charged was caused, by a beating received at school, was concluded last night, the Coroner's Jury bringing in a verdict of death from blood poisoning and exonerating the teachers from any blame in the matter.

The verdict was in accordance with the report of Dr. M. T. Sullivan, and Dr. Dan McNeil who held the post-mortem examination. Only two witnesses were heard at the final session of the inquest, school companions of young Muford, who testified that they were unaware of the boy having been subjected to hard usage in school.

PLACED GUARD IN CELL AND ESCAPED

Three Prisoners Break Away from County Jail in Burlington, Vt.,
After Overpowering Officer at the Door

Burlington, Vt., Oct. 28—Three prisoners broke away from Chittenden County jail here early today, after having overpowered the guard at the door, placed him in a cell and locked him up with his own key. The three who escaped were Edward St. Aubin, of Montreal, held for violation of the Immigration Act, and Chinese Exclusion Act, Arthur Stueley, of New York, held for New York State on a charge of forgery of money orders, and Charles Kelly, who is held for looting a Burlington home last Saturday of clothing, valued at $1,000. Mrs. H. H. Kelly, wife of the latter who is held on the same charge as her husband, did not escape.

St. Aubin has had a varied career which in the case to visit him.

One Sunday morning, the King happened to be walking along the bank of the Dee, when he saw the poacher fishing for salmon. The King stopped and said: "You must know that you're no right here. For one thing, this is preserved water; and for another this is Sunday."

The poacher waddled through the water and peering upwards, asked: "Who are you?" The King smiled: "Oh I'm the King," he said.

"The fisherman was instantly relieved. "What a fright ye gave me," he exclaimed. "I thought ye were the new minister."

Since his arrest several months ago by the motorcyclist corps the international boundary. A search of his automobile, the officers said, disclosed a quantity of liquor and four Chinese, the latter concealed under blankets. He was lodged in jail at St. Johnsbury and his sweetheart, Miss Esmeralda Gagne, of Montreal, also was arrested when he came to visit him.

THE BURIED CITY ON NEVADA PLAINS

20,000 Pueblo Indians Lived
There 3,000 Years Ago.

The first detailed account of a buried Pueblo city which 3,000 or more years ago housed probably 20,000 people in Southeastern Nevada was brought to Reno recently by M. R. Harrington, of the Museum of the American Indian, New York City, who returned from a ten-day expedition.

"The ruins covered with sand, ran in a continuous line six miles and are about a half a mile wide," he said.

"The outlines of houses of stone and adobe and stone pavements are clearly seen. Corncries, jutting out of the sand, and here and there the rectangular ground plan of a house could be seen. Everywhere were myriads of pieces of broken pottery."

"Some of the stone was dressed, 18 by 12 inches, and sometimes rough slabs were set on edge and the adobe joined in and over to make the walls."

"Dwellings are in a valley in which are located numerous water mounds. Evidently there was more moisture and water in the district in those early days than now exists."

"We found corn cobs about three inches long, and evidence that the people lived on the fruits of the chase and agricultural products. We found arrowheads and bones of deer."

The first clue to the existence of the buried city was from Jedediah Smith, who, in a letter written in 1827 to William Clark, Superintendent of Indian Affairs and member of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, told of visiting the district. However, no scientist had ever viewed the site until last week.

An expedition is being organized to uncover some of the buildings.

POACHER GLAD TO SEE KING

To Have Met the New Minister
Would Have Been Entirely Different.

"Here is a yarn about the King which will be new to most readers, and which disapproves a current notion that British religionists have lost the idea of Church discipline," writes a reader from the west.

"A church near Balmoral Castle, where His Majesty was enjoying a holiday, had just received a new minister, and there was a local bad un—a poacher and so forth—who had seen neither the minister nor the King."

"One Sunday morning, the King happened to be walking along the bank of the Dee, when he saw the poacher fishing for salmon. The King stopped and said: 'You must know that you're no right here. For one thing, this is preserved water; and for another this is Sunday.'"

"The poacher waddled through the water and peering upwards, asked: 'Who are you?' The King smiled: 'Oh I'm the King,' he said."

"The fisherman was instantly relieved. 'What a fright ye gave me,' he exclaimed. 'I thought ye were the new minister.'"
