

CONTENTS

VOLUME II

BOOK IV

CHAPTER I

	PAGE
Departure from France; what took place up to the time of our arrival at St. Louis Rapids	I

CHAPTER II

Continuation. Arrival at Tessoüat's, and the kind reception he gave me. Character of their cemeteries. The savages promise me four canoes to continue my way. Soon afterward they refuse me them. Speech of the savages to dissuade me from my undertaking, showing the difficulties. Response with regard to these difficulties. Tessoüat accuses my guide of lying, and of not having been where he said he had. The guide maintains that what he says is true. I urge them to give me some canoes. Several refusals. My guide convicted of lying, and his confession	19
-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	----