

Cementite, and Silicon as a base. To this, other elements such as Vd, Wo, Ni, Ti, Mn, etc., are added. Of these only C. & S. are found pure and free in nature but all of the elements can be separated at a certain stage in the laboratory. Iron is never found pure in nature. Late discoveries have detected various foreign elements in combination with iron. Therefore, it must be in the iron that the difference lies. Especially as the phenomenon of variance is found only between the steels produced with irons of different localities. In proof of which experiments have shown that Swedish steel or steels made from a Swedish iron ore base, are able to do more and better work than any other kind of steel. We also know that the Swedish iron ore, in its natural state, is freer from the detrimental combinations of sulphur, phosphorus and nitrogen, etc., than any other ore found on the European continent or America. But even when these harmful elements were removed or reduced to the proportions found in Swedish iron ore, the quality of the steel, although greatly improved, was not found equal to the product compared with, that is Swedish steel.

The presence of varying quantities of vanadium was given as the main reason for the variances.
