; CURRENT TRADE CONDITIONS.

ONTARIO.

Considering the unusually cold and stormy weather, the movement of lumber has been entirely satisfactory. The number of orders which salesmen have been able to book has been a surprise and is taken as strong evidence that consumers do not anticipate lower prices. Stocks in the yards are low, and it will be necessary to replenish them in order to handle the spring trade. There is an emphasized demand for box, lumber and slightly more inquiry for mill culls, and, the lower end of pine than for the midule and upper grades. The number of inquiries for hardwoods is increasing. The consuming factories are meeting manufacturers, prices and the tone of the market is very strong. A brisk demand is expected from this time on. Interference to logging operations through the deep snow has placed the control of prices largely in the hands of the producers. The latter are a unit in holding out for prices which will give a fair margin over the cost of production. Shingle price. in the Ottawa Valley are firmer.

QUERFO AND NEW BRUNSWICE

The course of the spruce market is still somewhat uncertain. Manufacturers are asking high prices but shippers are reluctant about buying, as their agents in Great Britain have not so far been very successful in closing contracts at remuserative prices. It is certain that lower prices will not be accepted without very
