PRESS OPINIONS

"The book reminds one of Gilbert White, of Selborne, and of John Burroughs, but has a charm of its own beyond either." The Empire.

"There is, indeed, an almost unaccountable attraction about these carefully studied out-of-door scenes. They show a minute observation, set down with a fine and commendable regard for accuracy of statement in the simplest of terms, and there is a sensitive, almost pathetic thrill in them which gives to the volume a singular individuality." Hamilton Herald.

REV. DR. SCADDING WRITES :

"Mrs. Traill's writings have been distinguished by a special appreciation of natural scenery, natural phenomena, and the forms and habits of the living creatures that people the air, the woods, and the waters around us. Mrs. Traill has done for Western Canada what Philip Gosse did in 1840 for Eastern Canada, in his 'Canadian Naturalist.' In their place and degree, such productions retain a place in a nation's literature, taking rank, for example, with Gilbert White's 'Natural History of Selborne,' etc."

SIR J. WILLIAM DAWSON WRITES :

"It is pleasant to find the venerable authoress still green and fruitful in old age, and that she has lost nothing of her fine spirit and graceful style. Mrs. Traill has earned the gratitude of Canadians, not only by exciting an interest abroad in Canadian life, but by directing the attention of our own people to the aspects of nature in this country, and the higher lessons which they teach."

These are a few of a chorus of commendations received, with eulogies on the appearance and style of the volume that the Publisher would blush to mention. Miss Fitzgibbon's Biographical Sketch is a masterpiece of biographic literature, and will to many readers be the most interesting part of the book. In its 32 pages we are given just those particulars one is most anxious to learn about this wonderful, clever old lady, whose first book was published when men, now past the allotted span of three score years and ten, were infants in arms, and who at 93 is a marvel of physical and mental vigor.
