

whose performance in the days leading to the evacuation and in the process of evacuation itself deserves praise. I am sorry that it has instead provoked strong and emotional criticism in some quarters. I think it needs to be said here that, in my opinion, such criticism is unjustified and unfounded. I can only congratulate the members of the Canadian foreign service for the job they did in the difficult circumstances that I have described.

---

S/C