Normal Development

The child's mental development progresses very rapidly, Every day he learns something new, and it is part of mother's work to see that he gets correct ideas of things. He should be allowed his own way in thought and ction so long as it does not interfere with discipline. A busy child is a good child, so see that his time is well occupied. The hardest time to keep the little one busy and interested is between the ages of four and five years. He is too old for baby toys, and too young for older games. This is the time when the mother appreciates the \text{\text{Contiledge}} for some kindergarten game or work to keep the child busy and interested. and interested.

The body should keep pace with the brain growth. The weight should have increased and the body lengthened out considerably. The head should be round and symmetrical. The wide opening in the top of the head at birth opening in the top of the head at birth grows gradually smaller and is entirely closed at two years.

The teeth should appear at the schedule time and be well formed and in perfect condition. The mother must keep their condition perfect, if she would give the child every chance to keep well and strong. When baby is such, mothers are often frightchance to keep well and strong. When baby is such, mothers are often frightened to feel the abdomen hard. It should be so, and always is, only the fear of illness made it noticeable for probably the first time. The abdomen is naturally protuberant in early phildhood, but if the navel protudes.

APRIL IN THE GARDEN

By this time the gardener should have removed most of the mulching from the various beds. It is never a wise plan to leave the heavy rich manure on the beds until the last minute. Of course one wishes the full benefit of the early rains which will soak thru the richly nitrogen-laden material, carrying food and strengthening moisture down into the earth. But too much of this richness is most detrimental to the well-being of the various roots buried beneath the surface.

Two Headliners at Shea's-First Scott Pictures at Massey Hall Today.

Toronto theatregoers are looking forward with much interest to the coming of the reunited George Primrose and Lew Dockstader Minstrels to the Alexandra Theatre for four nights commencing Wednesday next. The reunion of the black-face stars after a ten-year separation has been an event that has excited much comment the country over and brought record-breaking crowds to see them in every city they have thus far visited on their present tour. Both Mr. Primrose's and Mr. Dockstader's fame will go down to posterity in the theatrical history of America, for they have contributed much to the enjoyment of rose and Lew Dockstader Minstrels to tributed much to the enjoyment theatregoers the country over Calling.

> "The Rainbow," which Henry Miller will bring to the Princess Theatre all of next week, has been heralded by the critics of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago as the most beautiful stage story ever written by an American author. "It deserves to rank as the American 'Rosemary,'" says The New York Sun, "only that it happens to be an infinitely better written play." "It is a beautiful play, beautifully acted," says The New York Times, "It adds dignity and distinction to the American stage," says The New York World. "It is indeed a thing of iridescent loveliness," says The Chicago Inter-Ocean. "It is 'A beautiful play beautifully acted.'" says The Chicago Tribune. "'The acting big and fine," says The Chicago and hardens in water.

At Shea's Next Week. Manager Shea has arranged an all-star show at Shea's Theatre for next week. "Little Lord Roberts" makes his first bow to the Toronto public. He is the world's smallest comedian; he is 22 years old, weighs fifteen pounds and is twenty-four inches high. He is marvelously intelligent and presents a program that is well worthy of the most famous of comedians. Sharing the week's honors of head-line place is Ethel Green, "America's daintiest comedienne." She has an entirely new repertoire of songs, and her many admirers here are quite sure the lovely singer will also be showing an immense favorite and is sure of a warm welcome. Winsome, clever Una Clayton and her players have not been seen here in many seasons and are presenting Miss Clayton's greatest success, "A Child Shall Lead Them." There is always a warm welcome ways a warm welcome awaiting Stuart Barnes. He is called the best of all American monologists and is as big a favorite abroad as in his own land. Edmund Hayes and his company are presenting "The Piano Movers," and this means a laugh from the audience every minute this screamingly funny man and his support are on the stage. Taught Eskimos Turkey Trot. A. W. "Lucky" Scott, the well-known sportsman and mining man, whose experiences in the Arctic with an expedition composed of Toronto men, are to be depicted in moving pictures at Massey Hall this afternoon and evening, tells some unique stories of the strange life in the frozen north. Speaking recently, he said: "At Admiralty Sound, we met the most northerly Eskimos. They came on board and we traded liberally with where "The Girls From Joyland" hold them for furs and ivory. These people are very fond of music and if you "The Bowery Burlesquers." hum a tune over the immediately play it on a concertina.

The women are good waltzers, too, and immediately learned the turkey trot, which some of the younge members of our party taught them. "An Eskimo can do with a match what no white man can do. He can split one safety match into four good Then when one-quarter is burned twenty people can light their pipes from it."

The pictures which the Scott party

rought back are the first ever shown of the Canadian Arctic regions and many of the incidents depicted thrilling in interest. Dr. J. G. Knowlion, physician on the S. S. Neptune, which carried the Scott party, acts as lecturer and explains the pictures. The engagement is for all next week themselves to lives of sobriety and with daily matinees, excepting Friday, when the hall is occupied by other entertainment.

For the Little Ones: Popcorn, Peanuts and Candy

HERE is nothing lovelier in this world than a happy child, unless it be several of them. And it takes so little to make them happy. Two cups of sugar, a little water, a tablespoon of butter and some extract stand for an afternoon of joyful taffy pulling.

There is magic to them in the word popcorn, and the promise of a little party will make the wildest girl angelic. One of the best ways to pop corn is to use an iron frying pan in the place of the open popper. There is no danger of the corn burning before it is popped and it is richer.

Shell the corn and put a tablespoon of lard in the pan; heat it until it commences to smoke, pour in two-thirds of a cup of corn, cover and shake gently over the fire until it stops popping. If it is to be cracker-jack-that is, mixed with peanuts and covered with molasses-prepare the syrup thus: Use a cup of sugar to a cup of New Orleans molasses. Add no water and boil gently until it hardens in cold water. Now add a fourth of a teaspoon of baking soda and beat briskly. Remove from fire and pour over the nuts and corn The syrup must be boiled in a deep vessel, as it foams up when the soda is put into it.

A well-liked candy that is very quickly made is called "seafoam." Boil Rainbow' is a beautiful play; Miller's two cups of sugar with a half a cup of water until it threads from the spoon Maple sugar may be used, or light brown sugar; if granulated sugar is

A splendid candy base is made without cooking (and can be finished by the children in as many ways as there are flavors and colors) with the white of an egg and confectioners' sugar. This is so pure and harmless that any child can eat all it wants without

Sift the sugar, which is also called "triple X," and mix in the egg white; a few drops of cream may be added if a rich candy is wanted. When the mixture is thick enough to roll out like pastry, hand it over
