Turks Reserve Fire for Warships and Ignore Destroyers.

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, March 13.—2.30 a.m.—The officers of the British battleship Triumph, formerly the Chilean battleship Libertad, which has been 17 times in action in the Dardanelles, gave an account of the fighting in the tortuous waterway, to The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Mitylene, where the Triumph is coaling.

"Trial trips were made into the entrance of the Dardanelles on Feb. 18, by torpedo boat destroyers, which got within 1000 yards of the forts," said one of the officers. "The destroyers were not fired upon, as the Turks, probably thru a shortage of ammunition, reserved their shells for the larger ships. The Triumph was ordered to hombard fort 1, and destroy battery No. 50, both on the European side of the straits but we could find no trace hombard fort 1, and destroy battery No. 50, both on the European side of the straits, but we could find no trace of the battery, which even the seaplanes falled to locate.

Spectacular Combat.

"Along the shore we perceived trenches and barbed wire entanglements which had been erected to prevent landings. Some troops also were seen entrenched on the hills. On the morning of Feb. 19, all the allied ships proceeded against the outer forts, seen entrenened on the fills. On the morning of Feb. 19, all the allied ships proceeded against the outer forts, opening fire at 7500 yards.

"They received no reply. The Triumph reconnoitred Cape Helles' defences and opened fire on them during the afternoon with her 7-inch guns, causing very heavy damage.

"When we rejoined the fleet in the evening a spectacular scene was witnessed. The French ships were firing furously from the south, while two British ships steamed up and down, firing salvos. Bad weather interrupted the operations, which were resumed the 25th, and the Triumph succeeded in locating battery No. 50. The same day three trips into the entrance were made by various British ships, the Triumph getting to within 2000 yards of fort 3 and making direct hits on the enemy's guns.

"That night the Turks burned the lighthouses. The next day mine sweepers passed thru the entrance under the protection of the Triumph.

Shell Pierced Armor.

"On March 1 the Triumph was ordered against Fort Dardanus, where she was hit thrice, one shell going thru her armor, killing one man. This would have been a serious affair, but the shell exploded before it penetrated. Another shell went clean thru the captain's cabin.

tain's cabin.

"The same evening the Triumph covered a landing party which blew up some of the important works on the Asiatic side. The explosions sent fragments of wreckage hundreds of feet into the air and three-quarters of the distance across the straits.

"All the men of the Triumph are in excellent spirits. Thruout the operations one would have thought these men were expected in some sporting." men were engaged in some sporting expedition rather than in deadly war-

"There is not a shadow of evidence that the U-8 sank the missing steamer Oriole, and her loss was probably due to mines or the stupidity of, perhaps, her drunken crew. What will now happen to the brave officers and crew we do not know, but they are in the power of a nation from which experience teaches us anything can be expected, a nation that out of cowardice lowers its flag, exercises deceit with neutral flags, exercises every unthinkable roughness towards those unable to defend themselves, carries on war with lies, deceit and dishonor, promisee head money for murdered Germans, tries to hire assassins, and whose officers personally rob unarmed civilians and steal their purses and money, has already proved that it has thrown over all feeling of shame. The fatherland stands behind the men of the U-8 and will not allow unkindness of any kind. We have many English, French and Russian prisoners and can make reprisals accordingly. If up to now Germany has hesitated to do so, we now dare hope it will no longer wait."
