WOMAN'S WORLD.

HEART &amp; ME.

By Celia Myrover Robinson.
Heart, 'o me, the world is sweetest the violets blooming.
All the tender, green things are laughing in the sun.
Summer time is coming!
Bird and brook are singing for the joy-days now begun.

Oh, the weary, weary days, and nights that followed after.
Oh, the bitter tears we shed, and oh, the mist of pain!
Sad, my heart? Be glad, my heart!
Listen to the laughter!
How the sunshine glimmers on the blossoms wet with rain!

Heart 'o me, the world is sweet! Remember not thy sorrow.
Follow after running brook, and bloom, and bird, and bee!
Sad, my heart? Be glad, my heart!
Greet the good to-morrow!
Wist ye not the golden world was made for thee and me?

MUSIC OF SPOKEN VOICE.

Miss Florence Farr Demonstrates
New Method, o

A pleasing departure from the regular Saturday afternoon lecture in the variety chemical building was given by Miss Florence Farr of London, England, on Saturday.

With the aid of a light accompaniment on a psalter, she demonstrated a new method of rendering emotional poetry.

Neither singing, chanting nor declaring in the ordinary sense of the words she rendered, in an exquisitely modulated form of recitative, a number of examples from William Morris' translation of the "Odyssey," Robert Gilbert's translation from "Turpindes," Lady Gregory's translations from the Irish, and poems by Ernest D'Leys and W. B. Yeats.

Miss Farr prefaced her recital by an account of her adopted method of rendering poetry, which she characterized as simply singing and expression of the melody of the words.

Altho Miss Farr has specialized upon the method, it is said by local critics to be not wholly new, but, after all, the method which all good readers of poetry have always adopted. It is likely that the Irish and Welsh bards and the Saxon scop recited their long narrative poems in a like manner.

Miss Farr has studied and written to-day at the home of Mrs. Edward Currie, 24 Tyndal-avenue.

The entertainment was thoroughly enjoyed by the large gathering of auditors, and Miss Farr was accorded a generous ovation at the close of her demonstrations.

Buchanan's Wife

The Story of a Woman Who Dared to Wrest to Herself the Love and Respec-tation That Were Debarred Her by Cruel Circumstances.

By Dumas Miles Forman and Published by Fernand of Harper & Bros., New York and London.

She wrote a letter to Harry Farmington, who was still in the Adirondacks. And this is what she wrote:

"I am sailing for Europe, Harry, on Sept. 8, and I am taking Allanor Trevor with me. We shall be gone a long time, I think—a year it may be, or even more. I feel that I cannot bear it any longer. The place maddens me.
I want a complete change of scene, and as far as is possible, of thought, too.
That sounds as if I were still in the nervous, rebellious frame of mind in which you left me here two months ago, doesn't it? I'm not, tho. I've been thinking a great deal, Harry. I believe, changing a great deal, too.
I'm not rebellious any more. I think I'm—as I said to Allanor the other day—a better woman. Don't laugh. I mean it. I look forward now with no rage or resentment or dismay to the life I must live—and that is a change, you know."

"All this is, I fancy, by way of leading up to something which is difficult to say. However, tout court, it's this: I want to set you quite free. You said something long ago, while you were here, about 'never deserting the colors you'd enlisted under.' The colors are lowered, Harry; the army is disbanded, and you're free. Look, the thing is like this: I will not dodge or evade the truth. We two people love each other very dearly. I admit that, and I am proud of it. But here I am, a woman bound—as I said to you that day in the Japanese pavilion—by a chain, and the other end of my chain is lost in the dark. So our love is hopeless—oh, entirely hopeless! But because it still exists we must, for both our sakes, see each other or be near each other.
It would be too hard for us. That is, in fact, why I am going away, and it is also why I do not want you to go on exploring and all such—that you begin again to live your own life quite irrespective of me, and that my concerns cease altogether to occupy you. You understand, don't you, Harry? You see how miserable I should be to feel that I had wrecked you, bound you to my chariot wheels, and that I could never be anything more to each other.
You understand, don't you, how glad and proud I shall be to know that you are doing fine things, important things as you have already done? So I shall and by the great love I bear you, put never be anything more to each other.
You understand, don't you, how glad
