MR. WHITNEY'S PRONOUNCEMENT.
 The air is clearing, and it is possible now to clearly diagnose the situation. Almost all the newspapers of the province have declared their attitude on prohibition. We know also where to find all the leading men of the province. They have ranged themselves either on the side of prohibition or against it. They have either given publicity to their views or are prepared to do so. They are fighting in the open. The last one to declare himself is Mr. Whitney, leader of the opposition. He has ranged himself with those who are against prohibition, and he will appeal to the country as being opposed to the referendum that Premier Ross has introduced. The only public man who is conspicuously prominent by his failure to fight in the open on this issue is Premier Ross. He refuses to accept the responsibility for prohibition, although he has been a prohibitionist all his life, and also he promised the prohibitionists he would introduce a measure of that kind at the earliest opportunity. Premier Ross stands self-condemned by all who are believers in responsible government. The false position he has assumed becomes accentuated when contrasted with the honest and bold position taken by the leader of the opposition, Mr. Whitney. He is not afraid to risk his political future on this issue. He believes that prohibition, as it is set out in the government's measure, will not work for the benefit of the country, and he opposes it in favor of efficient government restriction of the liquor traffic on the lines on which it is now being conducted. In adopting this platform, he ought to have the sympathy and support of such papers as The Globe and of such men as Principal Grant, whose opinions are exactly the same as those championed by the leader of the opposition. It is difficult or impossible to find any newspaper or public man to commend or endorse the cowardly attitude assumed by the Premier. He takes the ground that, come what may, his political fortunes must not be involved in the struggle. He has fixed the same so that no matter what the vote of the referendum he is sure to win. If he accepted the leadership of the prohibitionists in the fight, and if he committed the government to the same cause, he would undoubtedly have added strength to the temperance ranks. If the people knew that Premier Ross was not only fighting for the referendum, but for prohibition, with all the forces at his command, they would be much more inclined to support a prohibitory measure than they are with all the uncertainties of the referendum as it is now before them. Premier Ross' cowardice and trickery contrast very sharply with Mr. Whitney's honesty and courage. We know exactly where the leader of the opposition now stands, and we know what we may expect if he is returned to power. We believe that his policy for curtailing the number of licenses and for an honest administration of the license law is just the kind of a policy the people want to see carried out. There is an honest sentiment in favor of temperance throughout this province, and an honest endeavor to see the efficiency of the existing legislation would be gladly welcomed by the great majority of the people of Ontario. It is admitted that we cannot have prohibition, but there is a strong belief that a decided improvement through restriction is possible. Mr. Whitney's policy is one that exactly meets the requirements of the case. When the issue goes squarely before the people, we believe that the common sense of the country will support the leader of the opposition because of the honesty and courage of his course and the efficacy of his proposal in the cause of true temperance.

PREMIER ROSS SELF-CONVICTED.
 Mr. Ross' attitude on prohibition is artificial. It is altogether dishonest. The Premier is so deeply involved in political trickery in this issue that he finds it impossible to maintain his consistency. Ross, the one-time honest prohibitionist, is continually getting tangled up with Ross, the political trickster. There was a bad mix-up of the two gents in the legislature on Wednesday afternoon. In the course of his speech on the second reading of the Liquor Act, the Premier sent the idea that any honest prohibitionist would have been going to the polls for fear of being a "marked" man. "Do you want to imply," said the Premier, "that a prohibitionist is tainted with moral cowardice?" Mr. Ross then burst into an oratorical eulogy on the martyrs in history who have had the courage of their convictions, who suffered and died for the cause they represented. Such men were the Presbyterians in Scotland, who were hunted like partridges because they remained true to their convictions. Such were the abolitionists of the United States, men like William Lloyd Garrison, who said: "I have taken this ground; I will not retreat a single inch; I will be heard"; and he was heard, above the booming of the cannon, in that terrible civil war.

 Premier Ross had no use for the prohibitionist who was afraid to hoist his colors. He went on to say:
 "We are here in the full blaze of the twentieth century liberty, and ask somebody to hoist an umbrella over us as we go to the polls to vote for prohibition, and we ask somebody to take us to vote for John Smith as an alderman, and when you get inside and mark a ballot for councillor you slip a ballot into the box for prohibition, and in that way you expect prohibition to be effective! Great movements and reforms are not won in that way."
 It was Mr. Ross, the one-time ardent prohibitionist, who gave voice to these noble thoughts. But it was Mr. Ross, the political trickster, who held the floor during the protection of the referendum. Every word that the Premier said in praise of the martyrs of history who had the courage of their convictions was a stab at himself. Mr. Ross has posed for thirty years as a prohibitionist. Does he say, like William Lloyd Garrison, "I have taken this ground; I will not retreat a single inch"? Not he. When the booming of the cannon is heard Premier Ross deserts his cause and hides in the cellar. Premier Ross is not satisfied with the protection of the law. Nothing less than a bomb-proof compartment will do him. If he should Mr. Ross ridicule the private prohibition ranks for going to the polls under the cover of an umbrella, when he, the standard-bearer of the party, drops the colors as soon as the booming of the guns is heard? Great movements and reforms are not won by cowardly leaders of this stamp. It will become Mr. Ross, who deserts the ranks when his own personal welfare is in danger, to accuse of cowardice the private of the bright and shining of the party. He is not a prohibitionist, but he is a coward.

UNIVERSITY CONVOCATION.
 The University of Toronto needs a great many things, and some of them badly. Of these, the government seems willing to provide a part at least. There was a promise made of a new Science Building at the last session of the legislature. A whole year has since elapsed, and the nothing is yet to be seen of it we are glad to believe it is on the way. Such things as these are necessities; the government must provide them. It is the duty of the University, the people's University, is a second-rate institution.
 We can hardly ask the government to do more than provide the necessities. The University must look elsewhere for the "extras," indispensable as they seem. The most pressing need of this kind is that of a Convocation Hall. After the fire in 1880 the finances of the University did not permit the rebuilding of the old Convocation Hall, which was even then too small. The teaching departments have since required every available dollar of the revenues, and will continue to do so.
 A movement has recently been organized by the Alumni Association to provide the University with a hall sufficiently large to afford accommodation for the annual commencement exercises, and for various other meetings of an academic and social character. The great expansion of the University in recent years demands a large hall for this purpose. No hall on the University grounds would now accommodate a meeting of the students of even one of the faculties. The Alumni Association has issued an appeal to the graduates, undergraduates and friends of the University, to provide the necessary funds by subscription, and Sir William Meredith, the Chancellor, has warmly seconded this appeal in an arduous task. The German discrimination of Toronto Monthly. Sir William says this is a project in which the graduates of all the faculties are interested, and, with a united effort on the part of all, it should not be a difficult matter to raise the sum required, which has been estimated at $50,000. The graduate members of the faculties have already subscribed $3000 of this amount. It is hoped that the self-sacrifice and generosity represented by this subscription will be appreciated and imitated by the graduates in general.

EARL GREY AND PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.
 Editor World: In last Monday's issue you reported Earl Grey's address to the Public House Trust system of handling the liquor traffic. Amongst others, I was reported to have endorsed his remarks. This is wrong as I spoke, as a Socialist, against any system which would allow private interests to monopolize the sale of liquor, and also advocated the abolition of public profit. A resolution was passed by the House, and seconded by myself, advocating "the elimination of private interest in the liquor traffic, and the liquor traffic to be brought under public ownership," was carried. Earl Grey's plan provides for the payment of 10 per cent. dividends annually, and a sinking fund, which, in a few years, will repay the original investment, while allowing the dividends to go on in perpetuity. This is not public ownership, but a mere change of private ownership. G. Weston Wrigley, Toronto, March 6.

TREAT BY TARIFF POLICY
 rights of Canada had been given away, and the country was sick and tired of such treatment. It wanted more like such treatment. It wanted more like the interests of Canada, also he never had the opportunity to hold the British government to such a magnificent declaration as that contained in the despatch of Lord Lansdowne (1871, hear).
 Here was this despatch of Lord Lansdowne written in August, 1871, which he stood up for Canadian rights in the Alaska boundary matter, and yet the government had never raised a hand to prevent this declaration being swept to the four winds of heaven, while the United States got all they wanted, and our interests were over-ruled. The same thing is happening with the German treaty, and it will continue so long as we have unparliamentary men at the head of affairs in this country.
 Some Liberal members, "No, no." "Unparliamentary."
 "Yes," continued Mr. Maclean, "I say that the affairs of this country are in the hands of unparliamentary men. They are the men who were the Commercial Unionists a few years ago, who told us the country could only exist upon a protective and un-Canadian policy (Opposition cheers). The preference to Great Britain was one evidence of unparliamentary and un-Canadian policy of the present government, and this treaty with Germany was the outcome of it."
 "All this," Mr. Maclean continued, "is because hon. gentlemen opposed, but have not written in their trade policy, they have always been silly-shavelling with the trade question and have always been getting into trouble. They have been honest protectionists, as they claim to be now."
 Richard of Oxford.
 Sir Richard Cartwright: No, no, Mr. Maclean: Do I hear the Minister of Trade and Commerce saying that an honest protectionist? [Laughter.]
 Sir Richard Cartwright: Certainly not.
 Mr. Maclean: Is he a dishonest one then? [Cheers.] He sits there a defender of the National Policy.
 Sir Richard Cartwright: No, by no means.
 Mr. Maclean: Why, then, has he not defended it? [Hear, hear.] Why has he not left a government which is maintaining it?
 Sir Richard Cartwright: The hon. gentleman doesn't know the difference between tariff for revenue and a protective tariff.
 Mr. Maclean: The Minister of Public Works says it is a protective tariff, but hon. gentlemen say it is a revenue tariff. It is a revenue tariff, and that there is a storm brewing, and that the government is in a very possible position to be overthrown by the tariff. [Hear, hear, and laughter.] When that comes it will simply be the result of a policy that this government has no fixed or determined policy, or is sacrificing the interests of the country for the sake of a few dollars. It has sacrificed them in the past and is prepared to do so again. The hon. gentleman, however, presented to a Canadian statesman will present itself in June next.
 Can the Government be invited to send a delegate to meet the other national representatives and the British authorities, with the view of arranging some kind of inter-imperial trade arrangement. Can we trust hon. gentlemen opposite to take part in these negotiations, in view of the record they have made in connection with the abolition of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty?
 They will go over there prepared to give preference and get nothing in return as they have done in the past. They will be regarded in the capital of the world as "rubes" prepared to give away everything for nothing. [Laughter.] There is any amount of evidence that the hon. gentlemen opposite are not competent to protect our interests in connection with foreign affairs. They cannot show that they have done anything in the past to the interest of Canada, not even in regard to this German treaty. [Opposition cheers.]
 Mr. Kemp is heard.
 Mr. Kemp said this German discrimination had been going on for four or five years, and the government did not appear to have done anything to relieve the situation. The government had frequently been urged to take action. For instance, in Toronto in 1900 a deputation waited on the Premier and asked that something be done, and on that occasion Sir Wilfrid described it as a German boycott. Again in July, 1901, a petition to the same effect was sent to the government from the Toronto Board of Trade, and similar requests were sent in from the Montreal Board of Trade and other boards. In 1902 a leading Canadian firm exported to Germany 1,767,397 bushels from Montreal and 1,849,842 from Portland. Five years after that, owing to this discrimination the total export was less than 50,000 bushels. The German discrimination as compared with similar products from the United States was 100 per cent. on wheat, 50 per cent. on oats and rye and 40 per cent. on peas. The United States trade with Germany had doubled since 1897, and the position of trade was this, that whereas Canada took from Germany three or four times what they bought from that country, there should be no state secret about this.
 No favors to Germany.
 Mr. Brock said the papers should be brought down, and Canada should set about passing a tariff policy to remedy this state of affairs in regard to Germany and to other nations from whom we could not get justice by dealing through England. Germany was the most bitterly hostile to the empire of all European nations, and so Canada owed her no special favors on that score.
 The House then divided on Mr. Monk's motion for the production of papers, which was defeated by 107 to 55.
 An Enjoyable Affair.
 St. George's Hall was crowded to the doors last night with a fashionable audience, on the occasion of a dramatic entertainment given in aid of the Toronto Orthopedic Hospital, East Bloor-street. The program included the play "The Characters being admirably acted by Miss Caroline Hope Creaser, Miss Edith Pepler, Charles A. Wray, and Miss Annette Barlow. A comedy skit, "My Lord in Livery," was exceptionally well carried out. The various characters were given Francis, Mrs. Wray, Mrs. Bath, Miss Wray, Miss Wray, and Miss Annette Barlow. The entertainment was given up by Judge McDougall, to whom great credit is due for its success.

LANSDOWNE AVENUE CROSSING.
 Ward Six Ratepayers Object to Paying One Quarter of Cost.
 A large and earnest gathering of the ratepayers of Ward 6 met in St. Mark's Hall, corner Dundas-street and Brock-street, last evening, to ascertain the feeling with regard to the proposal that one-quarter of the cost of the Lansdowne-avenue subway be met by local property owners. The question was discussed by Rev. Alexander McGillivray and Messrs. McManis, Rankin, Street, Badgley, McConnell, Pearson, McQuillan, Brown, McMillan, Dr. Adam Lynn and Assessor Commissioner Fleming.
 The feeling was strong against the city in general should be taxed for the whole amount as proposed by the Railway Commission, that is, one-half the entire cost. The proposal that local property owners meet one-quarter of the entire cost was deemed unfair, as property values would not warrant the imposition. It was felt, however, that rather than the project should fall through, the ratepayers should meet one-eighth of the cost if the taxation were distributed over a larger area. They felt also that the subway should be 24 feet wide to allow of the passage of vehicles as well as pedestrians. The increased accommodation and the safety due to closer proximity to the fire hall were considered worthy of considerable sacrifice if need be.

Killed While Hunting Rats.
 St. Catharines, March 6.—William Davis of Hamilton, who was visiting his brother-in-law, Stephen Furlinger, in Grantham Township, was accidentally killed while handling a shotgun this morning. He and Furlinger had been putting in their spare time shooting rats, which had been carrying off a number of valuable golden pheasants, and he got up at daylight to get a few more. He was carrying a shotgun and was shortly after he left the house, and when Mr. Furlinger went out 15 minutes later he found Davis dead, with the top of his head blown off. It is supposed Davis dropped the butt of the gun on the ground and the jar let the hammer slip. Davis leaves a wife and two children in Hamilton.

LOCAL TOPICS.
 In aid of the Women's Residence Fund of Victoria College, Rev. Solomon Clever returned last evening in Central Methodist Church on "Jean Valjean."
 On Sunday next Crosby and Hunter, the well-known evangelists, will open a course of revival meetings in Queen-street Methodist Church.
 The concert given at the Oakham House, corner Church and Gould-streets, was successful, both from point of numbers and financially.
 This evening in Knox Church school-room, Rev. Dr. Armstrong Black will lecture, entitled "The Ballad and Poetry of the Scottish Border."
 The exhibition room of the Ontario Society of Artists, 165 West King-street, was comfortably filled last evening at the lecture by Prof. Mayor on "William Morris."
 Henry Simpson, architect, has moved from his old office to quarters in the Commercial Gas Company's Building, at 37 Toronto-street, and has taken into partnership Messrs. Moffatt, formerly of Mr. Simpson's office, but lately of New York.

Story of Missing Wheel.
 Nearly a year ago Thomas Mitchell, 183 Givens-street, and a friend contracted with a college-street dealer to build two bicycles of a special design. The wheels were built and both men rode them till Aug. 15, when Mitchell had his stolen from the front of the Express Hotel. A Planet wheel, belonging to a resident of Ross-avenue, was left in its place, and Mitchell took it to Detective Harrison.
 Mitchell's friend was on East King-street last night, when he saw Arthur H. Pantar riding a wheel answering the description of the missing bicycle. He called Policeman Frank Tripp, who arrested Pantar, pending an investigation. Subsequently the owner and the maker of the bicycle visited the William-avenue Station and both identified the wheel. Pantar was then charged with the theft. He claims he got the wheel on Wednesday night from the bicycle room of a downtown establishment, where he was employed till last week as a billiard marker. He lives at 236 East King-street.

Let the Gas Escape.
 Considerable excitement was occasioned Wednesday night at Richmond Chambers, 11 West Richmond-street, where a meter had become disconnected from the pipes, allowing the building to become filled with gas. The meter was situated in a room occupied by E. J. Walsh, tailor.
 The discovery was made by the caretaker's daughter, who smelt the gas, and with the assistance of another inmate of the building, forced the door. Fortunately no matches were used, otherwise an explosion would have taken place. John Laxton of the Commercial Gas Company was sent for, and the break was repaired. A bicycle wrench was picked up near the meter, and the inmates of the building are of the opinion that it was some design person who allowed the gas to escape. A similar break in the gas fixtures was discovered about a year ago in the same structure.
