Here Is the Proposition:

Max Lamar was up against it. Lamar was a "crime specialist"—and he had sufficient reputation in his professional world to give him the assurance of such a title. Lamar was as familiar with the peculiarities and habits of every known law-breaker as is Luther Burbank with the disposition of plants.

He knew, for instance, that the notorious "Circle" Jim Borden inherited his criminal tendency from his father; that he was a resourceful desperado of the bold, masterful type; that the Red Circle that gave him his name was not always apparent on the back of his right hand, but only appeared there when he was dominated by the impelling crime instinct.

Is it any wonder, then, that he should have drawn a breath of relief when Borden "shuffled off this mortal coil" and the notorious Red Circle became a matter of past anxiety? And was it any wonder that he should have been unprofessionally disconcerted—amazed—astounded—stunned, when, chancing to look at a passing automobile, he saw resting on the door thereof, a delicate, well-groomed hand—the hand of a lady, marked definitely, indisputably, with this same uneven, blotchy Red Circle—the inherited birthmark of a long line of criminals?

What did he do? What came of it? What he did and what came of it form the basis of a terrifically gripping story called

The Red Circle

WATCHES

AFTERNOON FROCKS ARE OF SATIN AND CHIFFON

Clever Combinations Feature Pleating for the Underskirts Hanging Straight.

OVERSKIRT VERY FULL

Quaint Model in Dark Brown Illustrates Modish Ideas.

Many of the season's most charming afternoon frocks are clever combinations of satin and chiffon. Pleating is a feature for the underskirt, so that it hangs moderately straight from the hips to the hem, and when this style is made use of, the overskirt is invariably very full in contrast. One delightfully quaint little model in dark brown illustrates a number of very modish features. There is the pleated underskirt of soft dark brown satin, over which is poised a lighter brown chiffon overskirt with a six-inch hem of the satin. At graduating distances from hem to the slightly raised waistline are sewn widths of brown silk braid to hold the fulness out in crinoline style.

The bodice is very unique. Cut with a slightly low rounded neck and long sleeves of chiffon, it is fashioned of brown satin, richly embroidered in green, gold, red and brilliant blue flower designs, which provide the only dash of color in the gown. A deep collar-like frill of chiffon finishes the neck, hanging downward over the flowered satin, while bands of the silk braid about the lower sleeve portions are the only other trimming. Very high bronze boots, with beaded vamps, and brown and green ringed hose are worn with the costume.

"WAY OUT THERE" THEY ARE HELPLESS AND COLD

Belgian Relief Commission's Appeal is of the Most Urgent Kind.

ORPHANS ARE HOMELESS

Canadians Are Called on to Do Their Part for Sufferers.

A woman, who has nobly given of her time, money and energy in assisting the Belgian Relief Commission in its work in Liege since the food situation became so serious, chanced the other day upon a little fellow of seven standing among the adults in the line waiting to receive bread. The woman's cheery smile has done almost as much as her assistance in other ways, and thinking she might bring a little light into the little fellow's face, she stroked his curly head and said, "Where is daddy now?"

"Way out there," was the vague answer of the boy, and his chubby hand pointed off in the direction of the great battlefield of Europe.

That was all he knew of daddy. "Way out there," fighting for Belgium and the allies, perhaps dead.

"And mama?" pursued the woman.

"Way out there, too." And the tears began to trickle down the lad's cheeks.

Another Orphan.

And then the woman understood. Here was another of those orphaned by the bravery of Belgium, or the atrocities of Germany, another of the thousands of lads and lassies of his age that must fight the world's battles alone unless Canada will help.

"Way out there" is a serious thing to these helpless, cold and starving little ones, and Canadians should send their thoughts in the direction of "way out there," and do their part towards giving them what the world owes them—life. Canada must do it or they will die. Then our carelessness will be no better than the atrocities of the Germans who made them orphans. They killed those who could in a measure defend themselves. We will be murderers of the helpless.

Canada Must Help.

No wonder these women of the committee are willing to work day and night for them. No wonder they are sending their appeal to us across the water for food. No wonder the Belgian Relief Committee of Montreal is taking up the appeal and scattering it broadcast thruout the Dominion.

Canada must send her wheat, her flour, "way out there" to feed these starving orphans, and the equally hungry, aged, and widowed. The purchasing power of a trifling sum is wonderful when feeding those on the verge of starvation. Two dollars and a half, if sent to the treasurer of the Belgian Relief Committee, 59 St. Peter street, Montreal, will keep a Belgian family alive a month—ten dollars will see one thru the perils of the winter. Why not send it "way out there" now?

TEACHER HONORED.

As evidence of their appreciation and esteem, the Toronto pupils of Miss Annie M. Fox presented her with a gold monogrammed wrist watch at her home, 447 Ontario street.

OPERATION ON MAJOR BEGY.

ST. CATHARINES, Jan. 3.—An operation, with results which are said to be hopeful, was today performed here upon the eye of Major George B. Begy, second in command of the 81st Battalion, now at Toronto Exhibition Camp.

WOMEN'S PATRIOTIC WORK IS RESUMED

All Branches Again Busy Following Christmas Holiday Lull.

SUPPLIES FOR OVERSEAS

Three Hundred and Seventy-Six Cases Have Been Sent to Old Country.

The passing of the Christmas holidays means the immediate resumption of all lines of patriotic work among the women of Toronto. At 559 Sherbourne street, the headquarters of the Women's Patriotic League, packing of Red Cross and other supplies for overseas is again in order. Just before Christmas Eve the herculean task of packing 376 cases was undertaken. If one thinks of the size of the big box, called a case, and all the cases are of uniform size, one is almost overwhelmed in contemplating the labor involved in the ante-Christmas packing.

One would imagine, too, that the voluntary workers at least would feel inclined to rest on their oars because they had their home duties to attend to in addition to the patriotic claims upon their time and physical strength. But a call yesterday afternoon revealed the fact that many, if not all, are again at their posts, and that the well-filled cases are again beginning to pile up under the deft handling of the members of the league. Articles from outside, too, were reported to be coming in well, tho the things needed were, of course innumerable.

At the university two women were found to have resumed their efforts on behalf of the hospitals. Machines were humming and pyjamas, nightshirts and other garments evolved as if by magic, and spread themselves on the long tables, about which the women labored so willingly and efficiently. It is expected that by next week all last year's volunteers will again be in place, and reinforcements on all sides are hoped for and expected.

GIRLS ARE BUSY ON MUNITIONS CONTRACTS

Women's Patriotic League Sends Six Young Women to Parry Sound.

FILL PLACES OF MEN

Demand for Female Labor Not as Great Here as It is Overseas.

Thru the employment bureau of the Women's Patriotic League of Toronto, six girls have gone to Parry Sound and are now making munitions in a factory near by. The girls are said to have been choice in every particular and the object of their going was not as much to obtain employment for themselves as to permit the recruiting of the men whose places they set themselves to fill. This is one of the many instances which show the attitude of Canadian women towards doing anything they can in the way of assisting the wants of the moment.

That there is not a greater demand, however, for women in new avenues of labor thruout Canada, is somewhat surprising when we compare conditions here with those which maintain in other countries which are involved in the war zone. In England the women are now recognized as expert in this same munition-making. Those who in March last could only make thirty shells in ten hours have become so efficient that they can now turn out one hundred and fifty in the same time. Some of these are earning five pounds a week which, according to the scale of wages in England, is considered quite good.

The great Central Railway in the old land, too, is employing two thousand women all in the place of men who have gone to the front. These serve as messengers, booking-office keepers, porters, ticket collectors, restaurant and dining-room attendants. We know, too, that on the continent women have for months been doing work on the land to which before the war they were total strangers.

All of which goes to show that in Canada, strongly as we believe to the contrary, we are only on the fringe of things yet as far as the war is concerned.
