Paris, May 28. - Former Premier Clemenceau, in an open letter to President Wilson, printed in his paper, L'Homme Enchaine, appeals to the president to send over Colonel Roosevelt and "his companions." M.

ROSSING the Timavo River, the Italians have occupied the Village of San Giovanni, on the Carso Plateau. Their effective artillery preparation also enabled them to carry further strong positions east and southeast of Jamiano. They captured in this region nine almost new sixinch guns. Their strong defence beat off two successive violent attacks in the Vodice sector and on the heights near Gorizia. They also drove back strong Austrian parties which had penetrated their line south of Grazigna.

The Austrians, it appears, must make their last stand in the Duino region or lose Trieste and the naval dockyards at Pola. The evacuation of Trieste, which is proceeding, will take on a new burst of speed, lest the Italians cut off a large portion of the enemy's supplies. It will be interesting to observe whether the enemy destroys the city or leaves it intact. Some of the correspondents and newspaper writers at Rome are still inclined to think defensively, althouthe allies have discarded the defensive strategy for the offensive. This method of thought, a survival of the middle period of the war, accounts for the warning cries about a coming Austrian offensive in the Trentino on Brescia. It is for the enemy new to do the wondering and the worrying about the designs.

CALL FOR VOTES

Under this bill President Braz is authorized to take the necessary steps to make the measure effective.

The leaders of the principal political factions declared that they would vote for the proposed project because they felt confident that parliament, by the enemy new to do the wondering and the worrying about the designs. the wondering and the worrying about the designs of the allies.

Champagne was the chief sensitive spot on the French front yesterday The artillery was firing on all sides, and in the neighborhood of Teton the rival combatants engaged in grenade fighting. All the preceding night the fighting had furlously proceeded. The Germans thrice attacked the French and they were thrice repulsed. The cannonading still keeps fierce in the Verdun sector. The Germans appear to expect French activity on a large scale and their gunners are keeping quite alert. The siege of Verdun, lasting for fifteen months, has become the most famous and the greatest siege in recorded time, the not yet the longest. The old mediaeval castles used to hold out for ten years. All chance of a German reduction of this town, it seems, has passed. The action here has virtually turned from a German siege of the French to a French siege of the Germans.

Except for the heavy artillery action the British front is quieter these days than it was even in mid-winter. The infantry is doing little but raiding. The British, in a raid east of Vermelles, north of Loos, brought ina few prisoners. The artillery activity is focused south of the Scarpe and in the Ypres salient. The British aviators had one of the best days yet this year yesterday, when they destroyed twelve German machines and set about eradicating all traces of their drove down ten others out of control. British anti-aircraft guns shot former autocratist, reactionary and in down another. The British report only three aircraft missing.

News of another miserable failure of the German army and the German calculations has leaked out from the contributions of Paul Schweder to the German press. This person, who styles himself "imperial Ottoman war correspondent," tells the wretched story of an unsuccessful Turko-German advance from Hebron across the Sinai Peninsula to the Suez Canal. As the British fleet commanded the Mediterranean shore, the expedition had to proceed by forced marches across 200 miles of terrible desert, harassed by locusts, sandstorms, and every necessity. It was not even mapped. The Germans found the native Bedouins, for the most part, loyal to Great Britain and cold toward the idea of a holy war. The scheme to stir up a holy war among the Mohammedans generally proved a rank failure. The Bedouins, won over by "other means," proved, apart from occasional scouting service, quite useless. Schweder winds up with a fierce attack on what he calls German newspaper scribes and bluestockings. These pretended to know all about the country, but their information turned out to even for the wrapping of parcels. be utterly misleading and damaging to the cause. The reason for the publication of this frank confession of failure remains concealed, but it is probably intended as a preparation of the public mind for the British asm, real or feigned, has been disadvance into Syria.

In the eastern theatre of the war the Russians, according to Vienna, formed to obtain political equality. Mery, made by every faction except the extremists of the ultra left, to attack the enemy will not pass without their effect, for revolutionary zeal as a rule of inflammatory pamphlets were stored in a convent. A Russian army, it is said, has done this thing in the past, sympathize. A Russian army, it is said, has done this thing in the past.

On the Russian front, according to Petrograd, calmness prevails in the northwest, southwest and south, and rather intense action in the Caucasus. Chatham Mayor Will Instigate The Turks, who are on the offensive, appear to be conducting general attacks against various strategic points. The latest fighting is proceeding in the Baneth region, near the Persian border. Insufficient details have come thru from either side to show how the campaign is going.

The annual increased wages which the workmen ask exceed the total capitalization of many industries, together with nearly all the profits as well. In some of the works the owners offered to give all the profits to the workingmen, but these did not equal the demands.

"It is no longer a question of a congress of American neutral nations," says this newspaper, "nor of the formation of a theoretical policy to bring about united action. Recent events have wrought a great change. Pan-Americanism and the Monroe Doctrine have more meaning now than event.

Ghouls Plunder Graves, Wreck Buildings, Ruin Orchards.

By Thomas T. Champion. May 12.-I have just reurned from a journey of many miles in the district where Hindenburg made his "voluntary" retreat. Sir William Robertson has told us to what extent this retreat was really "voluntary," and if we wanted any further assurance on the point we have had it in the result of the last few weeks' fight-

After what I have just seen in the country which the Hun has vacated I am prepared, tho, to accept the Hun am prepared, tho, to accept the Hun leader's assertion that his forces went back at their leisure. No need for me here to support testimony already offered, of how chateau, cottage and farm building, after being pillaged, each received its portion of gun cotton, of how orchards and gardens were hacked and despoiled, and reduced to the last degree of desolation. Having wreaked their fury to the full on the dwellings of the living, it might have therefore, of a French country ceme-tery where I spent an hour in the twiof a recent lovely evening Hun Desecrates Cemetery.

This cemetery had for generations been the burying-place of the inhabitants of the countryside. It bore a closer resemblance to the God's acre of rural England than any other graveyard I have ever seen in France. Besides the grassy mounds raised above sides the grassy mounds raised above the remains of humble folk, there were vaults with imposing monuments. Evidence of the place having been well cared for in past years was to be found in plenty. The Hun, tho, knows perfectly well that his enemy will not recklessly shell a cemetery, so to afford his own body the maximum of protection he had built himself a series of deep dus-outs on the borders. ries of deep dug-outs on the borders. Amongst the trees bordering the buryng-ground he had constructed elaborate observation post. The thoroness of these preparations for a stay of indefinite duration furnishes incidentally another ironic commentary on the "voluntary" nature of the subsequent retreat.

With colorsal impudence the Hun had laid to rest in this country burial ground severat of his own officers. Their graves were thrust in at the side of the French dwellers who had passed away in the days of peace. I will give the German his due—every one of these graves of officers was one of these graves of officers decently cared for. The varmis goden memorials over th considerable taste in design.

The German yet living received his "voluntary" order to retreat. Before executing it he bethought himself of the dead French people among whom he had put the bodies of his own officers. Vaults Broken Open I did not see one vault in that ceme-tery which had not been violently broken open. In nearly every case the covering stone was cracked across—the work of a heavy mallet. In the entire breadth of the cemetery there was not one shell hole, so the destruction could not have been caused by this means. The coffins which had been inside the vaults had all disappeared, so had the contents. It is be-lieved that these coffins were used in some instances to enclose the bodies of the German officers buried close by. There is not a doubt, tho, that the main object underlying this orgy of destruction was loot—loot of the rings and jewels upon the fingers and around the necks of those who entered upon their last sleep in yonder chateau or farmhouse.

There was a shrine in one corner of the graveyard. The door had been wrenched off, the interior robbed of all its poor little ornaments, the figure of All this wanton devilry committed in a country burying-ground, under the direction, maybe, of some of those officers who are now interred there. The graves of those men remain unmolested. May they continue to be so. But may the deeds of those men be put on record and remembered.
