Montreal Detectives' Fierce Fight With Armed Burglars

Five Yeggmen Discovered on Royal Bank's Premises Show Fight—Four Escape on Snowshoes But Leave One Man Dead.

MONTREAL, Mar. 2.—One burglar is dead as a result of a desperate fight between five yeggmen, who had tried to break into the safe of the Royal Bank's branch at Montreal West, and members of the vigilance committee of the town. The body of the dead man was deposited in the Montreal morgue. It was carefully examined by the police, but nothing that would lead to identification was discovered. In the pockets were 80 cartridges, a looking-glass with a girl's photograph on the back, and a comb, but no papers. Chief Carpenter of the local detective force thinks the thieves were young at the game, as they were not supplied with very up-to-date safe-blowing appliances. Attention was drawn to the yeggmen by the noise they were making while in the safe in which to place nitroglycerine. A watchman at the Montreal West station of the Canadian Pacific Railway heard the noise, the bank's branch only being across the street. He then called up the chief of the vigilance committee of the town, J. J. Kirkpatrick. A son of the chief, E. Kirkpatrick, was the first to reach the scene. With revolver in hand, he approached the bank and called upon the guard to surrender. Desperate Fight. The yeggmen made out that he would...

Boys Are Safeguarded.

Asked as to what had become of his call for a special meeting of the governing board of the Toronto Industrial School, Controller J. O. McCarthy said to The Sunday World yesterday that he was in a position to know that no one need feel alarm as to the interests either of Supt. Ferris, or the boys, or anyone else interested in the matter until the close of the investigation. He said that he did not propose taking any further action until after Tuesday, when the commission of enquiry meets again.

Press Tributes To Hon. Edward Blake

Mail and Empire: That he was a great Canadian is recognized by his fellow-countrymen of to-day, and will be the judgment of Canadians of the time to come. Few men in the public life of Canada were his peers in intellect. But it will hardly be said of him by even the most partial critics that he had the gifts of a popular leader. He was not an inspiring party chief. He had not the magnetic quality that attaches the warm personal allegiance of the rank and file. Even to those closest to him in the time of his leadership of the Liberal party he seemed at a distance. Enthusiasm, buoyant optimism, sense of humor were not his. He was a man of a high and steady order, in some respects unequalled, was massive and cold, rather than moving—ratiocinative rather than brilliant.

He had the ability to grasp and marshal the details of the broadest sense, and in rhetorical effectiveness he was, if not peerless, certainly without a superior in his time or at any time since. His Canadian leadership for years past his pre-eminence in the conduct of cases before the judicial committee of the imperial privy council was unquestioned at his pre-eminence in his own country.

THE TYRANNY OF CLOTHES!

What the Arbiters of Fashion Decree That Men Shall Wear the Coming Season.

Show me the great and independent man who would dare to walk down Yonge Street in a frock coat and straw hat, or disturb the severe propriety of the scene by wearing a silk hat and a Norfolk Jacket. What heroic soul would venture forth in the morning in his full dress suit?

The cast iron laws of fashion are such that if the most prominent man in Toronto were to walk with all his accustomed dignity from the City Hall to the King Edward Hotel, with a trailing peacock feather attached to the immaculate band of his silk hat, he would be followed by a mob in two seconds, and the outraged majesty of the law would take him into custody as a suspicious character.

DARE NOT BE OUT OF FASHION

Such is the "tyranny of clothes," then, that we dare not be out of fashion. That though they be obliged to deny themselves in other ways, "they must be in fashion."

It is for this object that Hoberlin's, 151 Yonge Street, have arranged a wonderful display of styles and fabrics that will be the vogue this season. Commencing on Tuesday, the big store sends out its greeting to all men who want to see what the authoritative styles really are.

SOME RADICAL CHANGES.

There are radical changes this spring in both styles and weaves of cloth, that the man who is at all particular should not fail to get informed upon. For centuries, cloth of English weaving has been the world's wear, and the well-dressed Canadian wears clothes made of English cloth, not because it is the fad of the hour, but because it wears better, hangs better, and looks better.

Hoberlin's have their permanent buying offices in Bradford, England, and in consequence the display they are making of British woollens has never been surpassed in this city. Clothes made from these high-grade imported woollens and tailored by their artistic craftsmen will certainly outwear and ultimately prove more economical than those which cost less at the outset. But whether you buy or not, the invitation to come and see what the authoritative styles are extended to all. Young men especially, the college man, the man about town, every man who cares for his personal appearance, will find in the lines on display not the extreme, ridiculous styles seen in newspapers that masquerade as the "latest fashion," but on the contrary, the quiet, exclusive, distinctive, gentlemanly clothes that men of good breeding wear.

CARE OF IMBECILE CHILDREN RESTS WHOLLY WITH PROVINCE LOCAL MOVEMENT ABANDONED

Recognizing the urgent necessity of providing for the care of imbecile children, the province, the scheme of establishing provision for these cases at the new jail farm has been abandoned. It being confidently expected that the province will not delay in making such provision, the women's committee, who had opened a subscription list for funds to aid the city in this undertaking has been stopped, and some five hundred dollars returned to the donors. Mrs. J. Fraser Macdonald is in receipt of anonymous contributions, and asks that the names of the givers be sent to her in order that they may be returned.

ESPRIT DE CORPS AND PRIDE IN CITY MAKE SUCCESS SURE

Dr. Vogt Praises Self-Sacrificing Efforts of Mendelssohn Singers and Expresses Appreciation of Splendid Results of Tour.

In an interview with Dr. Vogt on his way home on Friday the general conductor declared that he must before all things express his admiration of the way the members of the choir responded to the demands made upon them. Many of the members, he said, had made real sacrifices to go. The serious manner in which they approached the concerts and the earnestness of their desire to reflect credit on the city, all had their effect on the final result, which yielded such untinged delight to the audience. Dr. Vogt said that in every composition of merit, that something new was revealed to the conductor in every adequate rendering. "There was something new in Boston that was not in New York and there was something new in New York that was not in London. The possibilities are limitless. It is only by study of detail that one can approach the grandeur of the composer's idea. After the point of view of the audience, said Dr. Vogt, speaking of the Sanctus and the B Minor Mass, "there is nothing like bass. The revelation and new beauty in this by the choir affords an unending exhilaration." Dr. Vogt dropped an interesting hint at this point. "Last night," he said, "I found myself hearing the Libera I got more out of it than usual. The conductor never hears the actual choir and many get more out of the score than they do out of the rendering. The mood I created in myself last night seemed to me to produce a little more characteristic quality."

Nothing has been definitely settled by Dr. Vogt, conductor of the Mendelssohn Choir, for next year's work, but a number of competitions have been laid aside from which to make a final selection. The programs will be arranged in view of the almost certainty of the choir going to Chicago where are to be given next year in Massey Hall. Dr. Vogt is going abroad shortly to France and Germany, and will, of course, also be in England. It is not considered likely that any European tour will be made by the choir. The cost of $70,000 or $80,000 would not be an obstacle in itself, but the real difficulty exists in the fact that the members of the choir are almost all engaged in business, and it would be impossible for them to get away for the two months of the tour.
