THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

A powerful appeal to the people of Great Britain to support the League of Nations is now being made. One of Lloyd George's pregnant sentences gives the keynote: "Civilization cannot longer afford to squander its time and treasure on the destruction of its own handiwork." That the country will respond heartily goes without saying.

Meanwhile German intrigue in the Baltic provinces and in Russia warns the other nations what a return to the old international system of the balance of power would mean for Europe and the world. Today's cables tell us that Riga has not yet fallen, but is in straits, although Allied cruisers are aiding in the defence. It is perfectly clear that Germany still has extensive eastern ambitions, and that this and the mutual jealousies on the Adriatic and through Central Europe and western Asia present the strongest possible arguments in favor of a League of Nations, which is the hope of the world. The powerful nations which have won the war must ensure the fruits of peace; and one of these must be a great reduction of the armaments which now oppress the nations. A group of compact, powerful, clever and unscrupulous German states must ever be a menace, unless the other nations look to such an instrument as the League of Nations to hold them in check.

THE ONTARIO ELECTIONS.

Ontario is in the throes of the most interesting political campaign in its history. There are 287 candidates for 111 seats, divided into Conservative, Liberal, United Farmers, Independents and Labor men. The two old parties and the farmers make the largest showing, and the last named are the uncertain quantity. Only four seats were uncontested, and only two of these are filled by supporters of the government, while ten constituencies are without government candidates. Soldiers, Socialists, prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists are lionized among the candidates. There is no telling, in such a field, who will be the winners, although a straight government victory would be a surprise to many observers. It is quite possible that the elections will be followed by a good deal of negotiation as the party most successful seeks to strengthen its position by alliances with one or more of the minor groups. So far as Ontario is concerned the old two-party system seems to have definitely broken down.

THE MOOSE HUNTERS.

A group of distinguished American writers are in St. John today. The Canadian Pacific and the New Brunswick Tourist Association are paying them some attention, and the visitors may be quite familiar, and they are in no sense strangers. That they will enjoy their brief sojourn here and their hunting trip in Nova Scotia goes without saying, for men of their sort carry with them an atmosphere which defies local wind and weather, wherever they may be. Indeed more than one St. John man would like to share the outing and catch something of the spirit of these gay hunters from over the border. They are no mere amateurs, for they are always out after big game.

OCTOBER DAYS.

Sunday and yesterday were glorious days along the river. While the nights were cold the days were sunny and warm. The splendor of autumn clothes the fields and woods, and the eye never wearies of the glorious view that spreads out from every hill or is seen from the river. Green and gold, brown and purple and crimson, mingle on every hand. The gold and crimson of the maples is scarcely more lovely than the purple of the ash and the silver brown of the oak; while beside the yellow of the birch stands out the duller brown of the beech; and the evergreen runs from the most vivid green to the darkest shade. Beside one road at Public Landing stand three maples. One in the centre is still a shining green, while those on either side are a brilliant golden tint. The effect is wonderful. Not far away is a large oak, whose silver brown leaves shimmer like diamonds in yesterday's wind and sun.

But everywhere the leaves are falling down, and each night's frost gives fresh warning of the time when these beautiful trees will wave bare arms in the wintry air.

The Reds in Gary are urging the people to rise against the soldiers who are now in control of the great steel centre. Uncle Sam will know what to do in the event of any such outbreak. Foreign-born agitators are not gaining in popularity in the United States.

A writer in the New York Evening Post submits the following, no doubt for the benefit of Senator Lodge:

"To illustrate the dangers inherent in the League of Nations, we need only consider what would happen if a red-headed ex-bartender born in Dalmatia, but naturalized in Springfield, Mass., while eloping in a 400-horse-power Buick with the second youngest daughter of a retired Bedford ship-chandler, were to encounter engine trouble while flying over Chihuahua and be compelled to make a landing with such violence as to fling him into Caranza territory and his hide into Villa territory. Not to mention the chance that the machine might be a 250 Snapworth monoplane."

The Toronto Globe says:—"Single taxers in Toronto are jubilant over several recent pieces of legislation, which have made possible the application of their theory of taxation of land values. The Assessment Amendment Act of 1919 is one of these by which dwellings valued at $4,000 and under may be assessed at a percentage of their value. The power allowed the city of Ottawa to gradually reduce taxation on buildings at the rate of 25 per cent. each year until all building taxation is removed is another."

The Soviet government of Russia is said to have declared for universal military service. Even the farmers when not working on the land must engage in drilling. There's a fine sample of Utopia. Meanwhile the Allies keep up the blockade, and have intimated to Germany that she should join them to make it the more effective, a thing she is very reluctant to do.

Canadians join with the people of the United States in regret that President Wilson's physical condition is still the cause of apprehension. The American president is a world figure, and the personal condition of the high idealist which moved his country to enter into the war for the defence of civilization.

If today's cables are to be relied on, Bolshevism in Russia is disintegrating, and there is much more hope of success for the All-Russian government and its armies, not only in Siberia but in western Russia, north and south.

Str. Rider Haggard fears the western races will be submerged by those of the Orient, because the former are committing suicide. Str. Rider Haggard should come to Quebec to live.

The Literary Digest has accomplished the remarkable feat of issuing a magazine without any typesetting. Plates were made direct from the manuscript. Perhaps the printers will be sorry they went on strike.

Henry Clegg is of opinion that labor unrest in the world has reached the peak and is showing signs of subsiding to some extent.

The Fiume affair, despite D'Annunzio, appears to be moving toward a satisfactory solution.

THE WATER SERVICE.

To the Editor of The Times-Star: Sir,—In Saturday's issue of The Times the city wants information as to where the supply of water is going. Twice I reported a break more than a week ago, in Wright street. Here there is enough water running away to supply the whole street. My opinion is it is nearly time it was looked after.

Yours truly,
W. E. LANE.

Domestic Happenings of Other Days

QUEENSTOWN HEIGHTS AND BROCK.

To Canadians this date is forever associated with the victorious fight at Queenstown Heights and the death there of wounds received in action of the British commander, Sir Isaac Brock. War was declared early in 1812 between the United States and Canada—or rather the British possessions along the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence. Immediately hostilities began and in July and early in October there were naval engagements on the lakes. Near Brownstown on Aug. 5 the Indian leader Tecumseh inflicted great losses upon the Americans under Major Van Horne. The same month saw the surrender of Detroit to Sir Isaac Brock—the greatest attainment of the war at that time. On October 13, 1812 Brock was at Queenstown Heights when he was encountered by the United States commander, General Van Rensselaer and a bloody struggle ensued.

In the end the victory of the British was complete and the enemy fled from the field in disorder leaving a great number in killed and wounded. But in winning the victory Brock received a wound from which he died in a few hours. A week before, for his gallant work in the war, he had been gazetted an Extra Knight of the Bath. The gallant Brock, whose victory and fame are recorded now on a shaft marking the bitterly contested field, was born in the island of Guernsey on Oct. 6, 1769, the year that Napoleon and Wellington were born. At the age of fifteen he entered the army. He saw active service in Holland and was second in command at Copenhagen. As a colonel he came to Canada with his regiment—the 40th—in 1800; here he served until he met a soldier's death at Queenstown Heights and won his victory.

A FRIEND OF MAN.

Let me live in a house by the side of the road.
Where the race of men go by—
They are good; they are bad; they are wise, foolish—so am I.
I would not sit in the scorners' seat,
Or lurk the cynic's hang.

Let me live in a house by the side of the road.
And be a friend to man.
—Samuel Walter Foss.

With very realistic sob the weary tramp had told the tale to the farmer's wife.

"But surely, if you have an aged mother to support," she said sympathetically, "you could find some better way of doing it than begging. You know necessity is the mother of invention."

"Not in my case, I can assure you," said the tramp earnestly. "With me, lady, mother is the invention of necessity."

A NEW NOVEL BY REV. H. A. CODY.

In his latest novel, The Touch of Abner, Rev. H. A. Cody assumes a humorous role than in any of the previous eight novels of his pen. It is a New Brunswick story, and there are local touches which tell of Mr. Cody's love of the St. John river. The story is a humorous one, quite out of the ordinary, who takes particular delight in mystifying everybody, and leaving them in doubt whether he is ever in earnest. But he can be very much in earnest when the occasion warrants, as sundry persons who effect to despise him or try to acquire wealth at his expense discover in due time. Mrs. Andrews is a good match for Abner; and their pretty daughter and a young civil engineer on a railway survey lend the touch of romance to the story. There are sharp points for designing politicians and kind ones for the reverse. The money grabber is held up to scorn, and the social climber is not overlooked. Abner owned a gravel pit that was wanted for railway purposes. Indeed his farm was largely gravel, and the story of the attempts by political schemers to purchase it makes very interesting reading. But best of all, Abner's large hearted sympathy led to the establishment of a home for orphan children.

As in all of Mr. Cody's books, the love of St. John there is no stirring appeal to the emotions, one follows the story with a relish to the end. New Brunswick readers will be especially interested in this book. McClelland & Stewart, Toronto, publishers—$1.50 net.

There was filed in the office of the recorder of deeds in Stockton, Mo., novices in which the articles mentioned to secure a debt of $46 were as follows: One shotgun, one rifle, two violins, one black tomcat, with white feet, named Tom. The identification of the tomcat was not left in doubt, indicating that the cat was considered by the mortgagee the most valuable part of the security.

Horsesham, Eng., councillors announced that the municipal water works had made a net profit of three cents on the half year.

JAMMED INTO VALLEY RAILWAY CARS ON WAY HOME FROM COUNTRY

Many People Had to Stand—
Large Number Went up River
Over Week-End

St. John people who thought the Valley Railway would help them enjoy Thanksgiving were not quite sure about it last evening. In the first place they had to get up at an extremely early hour to catch the morning train going out; and in the second place they had to be packed in like sardines coming home. Not only were the seats crowded, but the aisles and there were many people who had to stand all the way from Public Landing to Fairville. Not only were the first class cars jammed almost to suffocation but the baggage end of the latter was crowded. Moreover, the train was late and the people had a cold wait at the stations. Last night's was a mixed train, with nine freight and two passenger cars.

If a proper service is given next summer the Valley Railway will have a large suburban traffic. Opinions differ as to whether the railway will lessen the steam traffic. Many hold that the former will make new traffic which will help the latter.

A great many people went up river on Saturday. On the Oconee on Saturday afternoon it was like a summer week-end, so large was the list of passengers. The steamers coming down river yesterday brought a number of guests, the Premier last evening having an especially large list.

MORNING NEWS OVER THE WIRES

It is believed in Ottawa that the prohibition and soldier-gratuitous matters will not be dealt with by parliament until after the Ontario general elections have been held in order not to embarrass the provincial government.

The Handley-Page airplane, which passed over St. John on its way from Parrsboro to Minicola and was forced to land at Green port on account of the shortage of gasoline, completed the trip to Minicola yesterday and then sailed to New York where stunts were performed over the metropolis.
