THE IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT

Weighty Questions Treated in Both the Houses on the Debate in Reply.

Tanner, the Inflammable, in Trouble -Expelled From Legislative Chamber.

London, Aug. 14.-In the house of lords in reviewing the election just held Lord Rosebery dwelt upon the fickleness of the electorate, and admitted that the present government was supported by a large majority. The elections, he claimed, had shown that the creed of a lifetime cannot be put into the manifesto of a moment. The ex-premier also said that though the policy of the Liberals must have altered, their principles were unaltered. He was not prepared to adopt the view that the elections settled the Irish question. The schism existing among the Irish parties was regrettable, but that would not interfere with the question of self government for Ireland. This would have to be granted. The government, Lord Rosebery continued, would be forced to acknowledge that the best means of conducting Irish business is through the Irish. "I am convinced," he concluded, "that you will see Home Rule extended not only to Ireland, but possibly to Scotland, and I do not even limit the evolution there."

The Marquis of Salisbury, the prime minister, then arose to reply. He said: The noble lord complains of the brevity of the Queen's speech. Where there is not much to be done it is not necessary to spend many words describing what is to be undertaken at this session. The government holds that the abandonment f Chitral is unwise, as a question of moral as well as physical strategy. It is useless to follow Lord Rosebery through the wide area of his disquisitions. I will not describe our intentions in regard to the constitution of this house or in respect to the adoption of of home rule, and he protested that the Home Rule. When we introduce bills verdict of the election was not against teuching these matters, it will be time enough to discuss them."

> THE TIMES ON COPYRIGHT. The British Thunderer Delivers an Opinion on This Question.

London, Aug. 16.-Special articles appear in the Times this morning in comparison of the drink laws of England and America, and the profession of literature in America. The latter article erature in America. The latter article says that although in no country in the world is literature held in a greater esteem than in America, authors are worse paid there than in England, and the immensity of the country and the difficulties of the circulation of literature make publishers charier of encouraging young and unknown talent. Active minds, therefore, find more profitable fields in commerce, etc., than in literature, and there is no apparent prospect of a new Lowell or Emerson arising. In an editorial the Times discusses this article and the copyright question especially as it concerns Canada, "In which," the Times goes on to say, "Mr. Chamberlain, the secretary of state for the colonies, has a troublesome question to settle. He can give but one answer to Canada's request Naturally the Americans would say if the Canadians are authorized to sell stolen goods in o our market we must be authorized to do so also."
