Lady Cardigan And Her Book

Noblewoman Authoress Who Has Set London Agog With "My Recollections."

Memoirs Culled From Court Scandals and the Gossip of the Royal Houses.

London, Sept. 25.—A book which has caused astonishment among the nobility, and has shocked even royalty, has just been written by the Countess of Cardigan, "My Recollections," she calls it.

The countess, 68 years old, is one of the oldest of the dowagers whose sharp tongues, excellent memories of the past and defiance of Victorian customs have made them the betes noir of the modern best families of Europe.

Her recollections discuss the paternity of George IV. The matrimonial relations, also, of the greatest couples in the land are mentioned with the greatest frankness.

Her Maiden Name.
The maiden name of the countess was de Horsey. She was a great friend as a child of the Duke of Wellington.

Just after she was presented formally at court she went to a gipsy to have her fortune told. The gipsy prophesied for her a widower for a husband, a second marriage and a long life. She says:

"The prediction came true, for Lord Cardigan was a widower, and nearly all the men who proposed to me were widowers! I was asked in marriage by Lord Sherborne, a widower with 10 children; by the Duke of Leeds, a widower with 11 children; Prince Soltykoff, the Duke of St. Albans and Disraeli.

An Incident.
This incident of her girlhood is worth recording. She tells how one day she very much wanted to go to the old Princess theater to see a play that was causing a great sensation. She asked her father to accompany her. He refused, saying: "You could not possibly go to a play like that. It is one of the most wicked and wanton spectacles ever put on the stage."

Still she was fully determined to go, and at last found someone to take her. But in the middle of the performance her friend said to her: "You must leave this theatre at once."

"Why?" she asked.
"Because," was the reply, "your father and his mistress and Lord and his mistress are sitting in the box opposite to us." A pretty commentary on mid-Victorian morals!

A Grim Story.
Here is a grim story about the death of Lady Ward:

TOO MANY TO PICK FROM IN FALL MODES

A Surfeit of Pleasing Creations Materials Exquisite, Lines Graceful and Colors Good—Originality in Paris Models.

New York, Oct. 8.—There is no lack of fashion matter for discussion nowadays. New models to right and new models to left, lovely materials piled high on every dry goods shop counter, fascinating hats in every milliner's window, illuminating visions of the latest things in French frocks furnished by every new play, furs beginning to assert themselves, fall costumes cropping out here and there in the fashionable restaurants and tea rooms or on the avenue—yes, the autumn season is here and the harvest time for merchants and dressmakers is beginning.

On the whole there is no reason to quarrel with the fashion makers and milliners. They have given over goodly a chance. If a woman chooses the bizarre, the extreme, the ugly she has it to blame, for there is plenty of beauty and graceful conservatism from which to choose.

Trifle Alarming.
The sketches and descriptions of frocks worn during the late summer at the smart French watering places were a trifle alarming, so complicated and patchwork did they sound and look. Even letters concerning the earliest autumn models shown in Paris were scarcely reassuring, but we have contented all along that by the time autumn modes should have definitely crystallized grace of line and artistic harmony would triumph over exaggeration.

The end seems to justify the faith. Originality enough there is, in all conscience. Some of the models are even freakish, but a majority of the frocks which the importers have brought over from the best houses are subtly rather than vociferously elegant. As one woman with money enough to indulge her luxurious tastes and with good taste to indulge put it the other day:—

Many Models.
"I've been looking about and I've seen more than I want than I have at the beginning of any season in years. There seem to be so many models that are not only chic and handsome but possible too—frocks you could not

LADY CARDIGAN.

"On the evening of the day before her burial Lord Colville came to see Lord Ward. They talked for some time, and then the widower suddenly turned to his friend:

"Colville, you admired my wife?"
"Yes," was the reply, "I did."

"Well, come and look your last on her," said Lord Ward, lighting a candle and leading the way upstairs.

"The room was full of shadows and the flickering light fell on the lovely face of the dead woman. Silently Lord Colville stood by her. Ward was watching him attentively.

"Still admiring my wife? Well, she was a pretty woman—but you never imagine that she had such bad teeth!" He put down the candle on a table as he spoke and raised his wife's head from the pillow.

"With cold deliberation he wrenched the jaws apart. 'Look here, man,' But Lord Colville had hurriedly left the room."

Another Anecdote.
Another anecdote refers to her uncle, Admiral Rous.

"Mrs. Rous was very dictatorial, and I remember calling one day after her death to inquire after my uncle. 'Indeed, my lady,' said the servant, 'I may say the admiral is very much better since Mrs. Rous' death.'"

This next anecdote is of the acid variety.

"The Allesburys took a house at Cowes every summer. Although Lady A. was considered a beauty, she was excessively thin."

"She was devoted to Lord Wilton, but one day she went aboard Lord Cardigan's yacht, which was lying off Calshot, and stayed the night before returning to Cowes. Lord Wilton was furious about it, and made quite an unnecessary scene about it with Cardigan. Some kind friend said afterwards that after all it was only a case of two dogs fighting over a bone."

"Poor Lady A.!" She was scraggly, but to be called a 'bone' must have greatly annoyed."

only admire on a mannequin but wear yourself."

That is just it. Materials are exquisite, colors beautifully blended and not too glaring, lines graceful. Draperies are used in a host of models. Often, too, they are handled in a complicated fashion, a fashion that puts them beyond the achievement of the mediocre dressmaker. Yet even these intricate arrangements usually give an effect of flowing grace rather than of confusing tangle. They seem as simple as they are difficult.

MARK TWAIN ON COURTSHIP OF DAUGHTER

Famous Humorist Discusses Many Things at Marriage of Daughter to Russian Pianist, Ossip Gabrilowitsch.

West Redding, Conn., Oct. 8.—In the drawing room of Stormfield, the country home of Mark Twain, amid decorations of evergreen, autumn leaves, and roses, the American humorist's daughter, Miss Clara Clemens, was married to Mr. Ossip Gabrilowitsch, a well known Russian pianist. Present as guests were forty men and women, well known in society, artistic and literary circles, principally of New York city. The father of the bride was a picturesque figure in the scarlet cap and gown he wore when Oxford conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Literature. After the ceremony he changed to a suit of white flannel.

Interviewed Himself.

With characteristic originality Mr. Clemens interviewed himself "in advance on the wedding, on marriage in general, the identity and characteristics of his guests, his own health and other subjects having little or nothing to do with the case, and handed a copy to those who asked, giving as a reason that he wished to "avoid any delays at the wedding." In it he revealed a bit of romance in connection with his daughter's engagement. He said it had been broken twice. Recently the pianist has been recovering from a severe operation at the Clemens country home. During that time the engagement was renewed and today's wedding followed.

Miss Clemens' Romance.
Speaking of the bride and his new son-in-law, Mr. Clemens said:—"Clara and Gabrilowitsch were pupils together under Leachitzky in Vienna ten years ago. We have known him intimately ever since. It's not new—the engagement. It was made and dissolved twice six years ago. Recovering from a perilous surgical operation, two or three months passed by him here in the house ended a week or ten days ago in a renewal. The wedding had to be sudden, for Gabrilowitsch's European season is ready to begin. The pair will leave a fortnight from now. The first engagement was in Germany. They have taken a house in Berlin."

Age Has No Age.
Referring to his guests Mr. Clemens said, William Dean Howells will arrive at any time. He is 71 or 79 years old or along there. I have known him since he was a child. Age has no age. The word has no definite meaning. Howells and I pitted James Russell Lowell when he reached fifty, and Lowell pitted himself, too, not being aware that he had not yet crossed the boundary line of youth. It distressed him to have us mention the subject of age. At fifty a person is really very young, but he will not find it out until later.

Not at Work.
"Are you at work now?"
"No I don't work. I have a troublesome pain in my breast which won't allow me to stir out of the house. But I play billiards for exercise. Albert Bigelow Payne, my biographer, and business manager, plays with me. He comes over every day for two or three hours. He has a farm half a mile from here upon which he raises hares."

"Do you like it here at Stormfield?"
"Yes, it is the most out of the world and peaceful and tranquil and in every way satisfactory home I have had experience of in my life."

New Evening Attire Ideas

If this photograph foretells correctly, simplicity will soon have lost its hold over girls who wear evening clothes. Note the elaborate coiffure with its tasseled band of ribbon, the ends of which are joined with a jeweled button matching in color the gown. And note the exquisite black net fan embroidered in dove and cloud design in silver.

The gown itself is heavily embroidered and trimmed with two or three kinds of lace. The prettiest touch of all is the delicate 'lace' over the shoulders of this undeniable up-to-date girl.

The Week in St. John

Little was thought of last week save the appearance of Madame Ernestine Schumann-Heink, the contralto prima donna, who made her debut to the St. John public on Monday evening. By her exquisite art and magnetic personality, she indeed conquered an audience which gave her an enthusiastic and appreciative welcome.

Madame Schumann-Heink, who has a commanding stage presence, was gown in a creation of pale pink satin. On the corsage of her gown were her orders and decorations, received from many noted personages among whom was the late Queen Victoria, her gift having been a diamond cross with the letters V.R. I. It would be impossible to speak too highly of the accompaniment work done by Miss Hoffman, who added greatly to the enjoyment of the concert. This event was the means of bringing together a large number of the fashionable world, who for the past few months have been absent at the numerous summer resorts.

Among those occupying boxes were Lieut. Governor Tweedie and party, Premier Hazen, Mrs. Hazen and Miss Hazen, and Mayor Bullock and Mrs. Bullock.

The marriage pleases you, Mr. Clemens?
"Yes, fully as much as any marriage could please me, or perhaps any other father. There are two things tragically solemn things in this life, and a happy marriage is one of them, for the terrors of life are all to come. A funeral is a solemn office, but to them with a spiritual uplift, thankful the dead friend has been set free. That which follows is to be tragic and awful—the burial. I am glad of this marriage, and Mrs. Clemens would be glad for she always had a warm affection for Gabrilowitsch, but all the same it is a tragedy since it is a happy marriage, with its future before it looms the pilsnol line with uncertainties."

Is Pleased.
