THE TESTIMONY OF PROPHECY TO THE DIVINE
AUTHORSHIP AND CHARACTER OF THE BIBLE.

AN ADDRESS BY REV. C. H. WALLER, D.D.,
PRINCIPAL OF ST. JOHN'S HALL, HIGHBURY.

(Concluded.)

You will see then the ground—solid, human, historical ground (if human things are to be taken as more solid than things Divine), and such ground as men never dispute, which we have for believing the testimony of the prophets in all that they have spoken. They foretold things near to come, and their words were true. They foretold the coming of the Messiah and the things that are yet to come. Have we not solid ground for believing that every one of those things that are written shall come to pass and be fulfilled, as surely and certainly as the nearer prophecies and predictions that were verified in their own time?

Now, you see how those three heads of our subject draw together. The testimony of prophecy rests on the historical testimony, the historical veracity of the Bible.

I have not touched another large subject, the enormous amount of proof that is accumulating, day by day, to the historical veracity of the Scriptures in the minutest detail. The very last thing I saw was that they had found, in the excavations in Jerusalem, the "stairs that go down from the city of David." And then one heard the
