FOOD SITUATION IN FRANCE.

Some Facts About the Shortage at Present Time.

In 1914 production of wheat in France was about 82 per cent. of the normal consumption. In 1917 the production was but 46 per cent. of the normal production, and this, remember, never was enough for her consumption. After deducting the amount necessary for seed, the 1917 production was one-third France's need.

Food never has been wasted in France. Consequently, her normal food consumption always has been very close to actual food necessities.

Great Britain has been lending France large amounts of food and nobody disputes the fact that the British later are short of food.

Seventy per cent. of the men of France have been forced to go from the farms for military service, leaving the women to carry on the arduous work of food production.

In 1917 the French home food supply was kept up to about 85 per cent. of normal. This year it has fallen to between 60 and 70 per cent. There is only one-third the normal supply of milk in France.

The ration of the French soldiers has been reduced twice, because of the grave shortage of supplies.

France is on a ration of one pound of meat per person per week, including horse flesh.

For instance, France has been on a ration of 1-10 pound of sugar per person per month.

The rough flour used in France has been reduced twice, because of the shortage of supplies.

It should be remembered in this connection that bread has always formed 52 per cent. of the French diet, and is their staple food.

Dinner by Daylight.

It seems incredible that anyone should object to the very sensible plan of saving dinner by daylight. Many thousands of workers are presented with extra hours of outdoor enjoyment for all the outdoor months, to say nothing of the saving to the nation in coal, gas and electricity. But there are always objectors to every movement and the objectors in this case appear to be the women who like to give dinner by daylight. "Little dinner" of six or eight people is apt to last over an hour, or an hour and a half of time and hostesses claim that it is impossible to make the dinner table light by daylight. Flowers, silver and table decorations have not the same effect, viewed by the rays of the setting sun, that they have under the subdued gleam of shaded candles; neither do the women guests look quite as charming by daylight as they would by candlelight, or the soft rays of indirect electric light. And the provoking part of it is that Canadian servants will not accede gracefully to such a vital change in the domestic schedule—and in their hours of freedom—as an eight o'clock or half-past eight o'clock dinner such as is the rule in England, where daylight has been, would involve a dinner of 3.30 would be sufficient cause for a riot in the average Canadian kitchen.

So the hostesses these days must make the best of it, and wait for the giving of conventional dinners, lighted lampliously—and becomingly—by shaded candles, and indirect gas or electric light. Meanwhile a simple dinner table, with fresh flowers and windows wide open to the sunset glow, is not so unattractive after all, and all candles in silver sticks may be placed on the table, ready for lighting the moment the outside light begins to fade. Society is getting away from artificiality these days, and war and dinner by daylight is one of the features of the new regime.

Many Are Disloyal.

It is quite within bounds to say that in the armies of pan-Germany, of every three soldiers there is one who certainly does not desire to make use of his weapons against the Entente; and one who, on the contrary, will joyfully make use of them, as soon as he shall be clearly convinced of the necessity, to assist in the destruction of pan-Germany. The continuance of such a situation ever may be necessary to do what is necessary, to assist in the destruction of pan-Germany.

This is a fact of tremendous importance to the allies.

The Berlin staff feels so far from sure of the Slav and Latin troops that it does not use them in dense masses on the western front. They are, for the most part, either sent to Turkey, or utilized in the garrisons of the interior, or mobilized in the munition factories of pan-Germany.

It is the majority of them who are situated as to make an insurrectionary movement on their part particularly effective. It is for the allies to have the intelligence to do what is necessary to carry out the most of it—Andrew Cheradame in Atlantic Monthly.

$30,000,000 Spent on Refugees.

Forty thousand Belgian refugees are receiving financial assistance in England. In the second report of the War Refugees Committee, just issued, it was announced that there is no foundation for the curious but widespread belief that the money expended on the maintenance of Belgian refugees is, or will be ultimately, provided by the Belgian Government. The large majority of the refugees are now, the report says, regular wage-earners.

Ibsen Studied Medicine.

Henrik Ibsen, the Norwegian dramatist, at the age of twenty-one, was a medical student at the University of Christiania. Before receiving his degree a play from his pen was produced at the National Theatre, with such success that Ibsen concluded he would do better in the realm of literature than in that of medicine.
