A 'CROSS COUNTER TALK

Customer: "What constitutes good paint?"
Dealer: "Good paint depends on the materials used, the process of manufacture, and the skill of the paint maker—no more, no less."

"Sherwin-Williams Paint, Prepared, is good paint—the best paint, in fact, that can be made. No care or detail is lacking in its manufacture. The materials employed are of the highest quality and are properly put together by experienced paint makers. The linseed oil—the vital part of paint—used in S.W.P. is made especially by The S.W. Co. in their own mill. The pigments are selected with greatest care and scrupulously tested. The tinting colors are products of the Company's own dye color works. And the mills used for grinding and mixing are designed and made in the machine shops of the Company. They embody the most advanced ideas in paint making. With such high quality materials, such care and attention, S.W.P. must be and is good paint all the way through."

LEARNING JIUJITSU.

One Lesson is to Be Strangled and Then Resuscitated.

Mastery of the art of jiu-jitsu requires a drilling such as no boxer, fencer, runner or rower would need to undertake. The mind "must permeate the entire body from the head to the extremities," and to this end the body must first be brought under absolute control. The pupil is inured to the two extremes of heat and cold, and the virtue of perseverance is cultivated by special exercises for the summer and special exercises for the winter, says the author of "The Fighting Spirit of Japan." For the former the hottest month of the year, August, and the hottest time of the day, from 1 p. m. are chosen, and for the latter, commencing in January, the pupils start wrestling at 4 in the morning and keep it up until 7 or 8.

Two great competitions are held in the year, and in these historic contests "it is quite a common thing for 400 couples to participate." "Speaking from long personal experience," says Mr. Harrison, "I can state that the 'shobu' is a genuine mental as well as physical ordeal for the participant. In the case of the more advanced students, who come on at a later hour, there is all the horror of anticipation to be contended against. As one enters the building the only sounds to greet the ear are the dull and sickening thuds which proclaim successive falls, the deep breathing and panting of the contestants and the staccato tones of the umpires as they declare victory or defeat."

For the student who wins his bout and continues his progress until he passes as a pupil teacher there is another test of courage and endurance. He must be strangled and resuscitated. "The idea at the bottom of this seemingly cold blooded procedure is both to steel the victim's nerves and round off his experience, as it were, and to afford the newly promoted members an opportunity of putting into practice certain forms of 'kwappo' (the system of resuscitation), which are demonstrated by an expert teacher before strangulation takes place."

SAHARA IN A TUMULT.

Fury of a Desert Storm and a Quick Transformation.

On our way we encountered that terrible experience, a desert storm. It came down upon us with hardly any premonition, save of an oppressive stillness of the air and a stifling temperature. Then all of a sudden the whole Sahara seemed to rise into the air and pet us with its sands and pebbles. Within five minutes my mouth was parched with thirst and my watch choked with sand. The din of the storm was indescribable, and the flying particles stung like whiplashes on hand and face. Our horses were nearly mad with fright. For four hours the insufferable choking wind blew with its scorching breath, and then the heavens opened and emptied what seemed to be half the Mediterranean on our devoted heads. From parching heat the temperature sank to a little above freezing in a few minutes, and then the rain came down like a sluice, the great drops splashing the sand back up to our horses' bellies.

Finally the storm vanished as quickly as it had come, and the sun came out and smiled at our sad plight. Without a word we all stripped to the buff and wrung out our water logged garments. As we sat our poor horses like centaurs, waiting for the sun to dry our clothes, I caught Abd or Rahman's eye, and for the first and last time heard him laugh aloud. For a full minute we sat rocking in our saddles with mirth, until gradually our wits and our bodily warmth came back to us. I do not pretend to know how these things happen, but almost within an hour or two the desert all about us was green with little plants springing into life, and in the pools formed by the water in the hollows frogs were croaking the miraculous fact of their existence to a sunlight world.—Wide World Magazine.

Fillet of Sole is Rare.

A dish called fillet of sole often appears on the bills of fare of American restaurants, but it is very rarely sole. It is almost always flounder. The sole does not swim in our waters, and the only way an American chef can get sole is from the ice box of an Atlantic liner that has just arrived from Europe, and then it is at least a week old. Sole is a far daintier fish than flounder, and it must be eaten very fresh to be any good.—New York World.

A Bit of Sarcasm.

"Is that your regular suit of clothes, Josh?" asked Farmer Cornfussel of his son.
"It is. Correct thing right from a fashion plate."
"Well, well! I thought maybe you had to wear it because some o' your college chums is haxin' you."—Washington Star.

Henpecked.

"We're terribly henpecked, pa, ain't we?"
"Why, what do you mean, my boy?"
"Well, ma makes me wash my hands before I come to the supper table, and she makes you wash yours before you hook her up the back."—Detroit Free Press.

Literature.

"Do you consider literature an art or a science?" asked the very serious girl.
"Neither," replied Mr. Penwicket.
"It's a great big gamble, in which anybody is permitted to write his own lottery ticket."—Washington Star.

FELINE WHISKERS.

Delicate Nerve Signals That Guide the Lion in the Jungle.

Because a cat can go about so safely and rapidly in the dark without injury to himself or without running into things nearly every one believes it is due entirely to the fact that he sees with his eyes in the dark.

That a cat can see to a certain extent in the dark is quite true, but it is doubtful if he could go about so rapidly in total darkness were it not for his long whiskers. Note a cat's whiskers and you will see they are always as long, generally longer, as his head is wide, and a cat's head is as wide as his body.

These delicate hairs that project from the muzzle of the cat family are wonderful mechanisms. Each one grows from a follicle or gland nerve to the utmost sensibility. Its slightest contact with any obstacle is instantly felt by the animal, though the hair itself may be tough and insensible.

Consider the lion stealing through the jungle at night in search of prey, when the least stir of a twig gives alarm. The lion's whiskers indicate through the nicest nerves any object that may be in his path. A touch stops him short before pushing through some close thicket where the rustling leaves and boughs would betray his presence. Wherever his head may be thrust without a warning from the whiskers there his body may pass noiselessly. It is the aid given him by his whiskers, in conjunction with the soft cushions of his feet, that enables him to proceed as silently as the snake.—New York American.

ARABIA LIKES LOCUSTS.

Not Only the Natives but Everything Animal Eats Them.

Locusts are today eaten in Arabia pretty much as they were in Biblical times. Foreigners as well as natives declare that they are really an excellent article of diet. They are best boiled.

The long or "hopping" legs must be pulled off and the locust held by a wing and dipped into salt before it is eaten. As to flavor, the insect is said to taste like green wheat.

The red locust is more palatable than the green kind. Some say that the female is red and the male green, but others contend that all are green as first, whatever the sex.

Locusts must be caught in the morning, for then they are benumbed by the cold and their wings are damp with the dew, so that they cannot fly. They may be found in Arabia clustered in hundreds under the desert bushes, and they can be literally shoveled into a bag or basket.

Later the sun dries their wings and it is hard to catch them. When in flight they resemble what we call May flies. They fly sideways, drifting, as it were, before the wind.

They devour everything vegetable and are devoured by everything animal—desert larks and bustards, ravens, hawks and buzzards like them. The camels munch them in with their food. The greyhounds run snapping after them all day long and eat as many as they catch. The Bedouins often give them to their horses.—Youth's Companion.

Made For Fat Men.

One of the narrow arches in the gallery of the chapel at Columbia university is not exactly symmetrical, although the defect is not noticeable to the casual observer. The reason for the widening of the arch after its original construction had rise in a somewhat humorous occurrence. One of the early visitors was a remarkably fat man, who found himself wedged into the arch when he tried to squeeze through and was extricated with some difficulty. The builders, recognizing the possibility of other fat people being numbered among the future visitors, decided to widen the arch, sacrificing symmetry and harmony to practical need, as the pier was so constructed as to bear no loss of width on one of its sides.—New York Globe.

Hecatan Tried To.

"Thillo," said the teacher, "parse the sentence, 'Yucatan is a peninsula.'"
"Yes'm," falteringly began Philip, who never could understand grammar any way. "Yucatan is a proper noun, nom'tive case, second person, singular."

"Why," asked the teacher in amazement, "how do you make that out?"
"Yes'm," said Philip, swallowing hard. "First person Icatan, second person Yucatan, third person Hecatan; plural, first person Wecatan, second per"—

But right here the teacher fainted.—New York World.

Poor Old Wise Ones.

Some one has dug up the following from the Chicago Inter Ocean of Dec. 31, 1882:

"George M. Pullman, of the firm of Pullman & Moore, house raisers, is experimenting with what he calls 'a palace sleeping car.' The 'wise ones' predict it will be a failure."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Progressive.

"Some day," remarked the nice old gentleman, "you may be president of the United States."

"Mebbe," replied the son of the very big business man, "but if they want me they will have to raise the salary."—Chicago News.

A Man of Metal.

"Is he a man of metal?"
"Well, he is credited with iron nerve, a grip of steel and a heart of gold."—Baltimore American.
