The Girl who Hurried up Her Wedding to a Bankrupt.

(From our special correspondent.)

New York, July 4.—

The prolongation of the period officially known as "the season" may be considered entirely due to the ever unexpected and yet never surprising vagaries of our climate. That weather should revert to coolness after tropical manifestations is an annual excuse for superfluous manifestations of astonishment.

Once more, therefore, the world of the metropolis finds itself without opera (transferred to London), without more than a dozen theatres where plays and comic operas are given in contradistinction to polite vaudeville, and without other resources for the extermination of an evening than those afforded by the restaurants.

"All New York" is supposed to be settled in the suburbs, but in reality remains in town, clinging to the cold comfort of thrice told theatrical tales before the footlights, and such social changes as may be rung on the kaleidoscopic palm gardens.

A certain contingent of the fashionable world possesses the resource of polo at Meadowbrook, another that of golf at Ardsley and other country clubs, the glory of Tuxedo is great. There is, in fact, a study of contrasts in weddings, and the pages of romance would need to be ransacked to furnish a greater one than that provided by the actual marriages of the moment.

The brides of the day are wedded under different conditions. Had Balasco and De Mille, the old purveyors of what was known as the Mother Goose series of plays at the Lyceum Theatre, been in search of a model for a heroine they could scarcely have found a better one than the young lady who advanced the happy day for her union with the senior partner in the cotton firm that failed for the next little sum of thirteen millions at such an inopportune moment.

One would call this ceremony which took place within a stone's throw of the Church of St. Thomas eminently a marriage of practical people. The bridegroom, being plunged in the difficulties that follow a crash in business, could only spare the time from Saturday to Monday for the wedding and the briefest of honeymoons. The elaborate ceremony arranged for the last Monday in May and which was to have rivalled—in a smaller spectacular way—the Clark-Morris nuptials, advertised as a "diamond wedding," was, therefore, as promptly abandoned as he had been the farewell bachelor supper.

Out of the crash in cotton there comes still another illustration of woman's devotion calculated to encourage optimists and give the lie to up-to-date pessimism. The world of New York in 1900 seldom witnesses such examples, which are supposed to be peculiar to romance in novels and plays, and to find no counterpart or suggestion elsewhere. Anything unworthy, in a worldly community is always refreshing, and the wife of the senior partner of the defunct firm is already established as a heroine.

Many women would like to follow her example under corresponding conditions, but few women will. This is the era of unexampled luxury and extravagance, when the daughters and sons of money kings are exalted into great personages, and a trousseau purchased in Paris with money made in Montana is "the only wear."

The younger daughter of the much debated "to be or not to be" Senator Clark is, however, exempt from any suspicion of a marriage of interest. Her alliance with "a Morris" is one of affection.

In these wedding fetes, one cele-
