GRAND LARCENY.

Strange Charge Against B. Brandenberg, Author.

Missing Boy Also Found in the Man's Company.

San Francisco, April 24.—Broughton Brandenberg, a newspaper and magazine writer, of New York, was arrested last night on a New York charge of grand larceny. He is accused of getting notes from Grover Cleveland's stenographer and publishing them in the form of a political letter in the New York Times. Brandenberg is charged with selling the Times the letter and declaring it was dictated by Mr. Cleveland. He was arrested in New York on charges of forgery and grand larceny. The former charge was dropped, but after having pleaded not guilty on the other he was released on $1,000 bail.

On Feb. 12 the case was called for trial, but Brandenberg could not be found, and his bail was forfeited.

With the writer when he was arrested was his stepson, James S. Cabanne, of St. Louis. Brandenberg had registered as D. W. L. Leonard, of London.

FOUND LOST BOY.

St. Louis, April 24.—The boy found in the company of Broughton Brandenberg in San Francisco, is James Cabanne III, who disappeared from the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Julia C. Cabanne, here, on April 5th.

The boy's disappearance was made known to his grandmother by a man, who told her over the telephone not to worry, as the boy would be returned to her safely. The grandmother has always maintained the boy was with his mother, who now says she is the wife of Broughton Brandenberg.

Several letters demanding money for the return of the boy have reached here from Chicago.

ALD. APPELGATH'S

Appeal to Help Make Hamilton Better and Greater.

To the Editor of the Times:

Dear Sir,—There are not lacking many indications of a general revival of trade throughout the entire Dominion, and these indications are especially numerous amongst our local industries. Consequently, it seems to me that the present is a particularly auspicious time for the organization of the Greater Hamilton Association. As a city we have attained a great reputation for enthusiasm in the matter of outdoor athletics. We have led the rest of Canada, and even the American continent, in giving tangible evidences of our appreciation of the athletes who have brought home the greatest triumphs of the summer track or the football field to our home town. We have still, however, a lot to learn about the science of boosting for the industrial and mercantile supremacy of this part of Canada. According to the best authorities, the city is just about the right size now to take hold of a real campaign for growth. All over America there are business men's clubs that are doing a very good service for the towns in which they exist. The boom idea has reached a lot of places in Canada besides Hamilton, but not one of them has either the courage or the imagination to take advantage of outsiders, that is, Hamilton's good fortune to possess. No one who remembers the success of the summer carnival can have any doubt about Hamilton's ability to make good in the pushing up of any programme that needs a combination of energy, persistence, and hustle. I understand that the men who are at the forefront of the Greater Hamilton movement have a wealth of material from which to draw a programme looking to not only the corralling of many new enterprises for the city, but also to the securing of many needed improvements in railway and other facilities that will help to make this not only a better place to do business in, but a much better place to live in.

Hamilton has always been generous in the matter of making substantial money grants to railway enterprises, and the city has been amply repaid for these outlays. At the same time it must be admitted that there could be a vast improvement in the city's railway facilities, and it will only be because of the determined effort of an organized body of citizens that the improvement can be secured. Even the biggest of railway corporations have been known to hearken to the plaint of a city where the cries of individual kickers have gone unheeded. The Greater Hamilton Association should be a power for good in civic circles and undoubtedly will exert an immense influence on the Mayor and aldermen. It will be possible for the new association to render neighborhood politics obsolete in the City Council. The crying need of the hour with the movement is a large and thoroughly representative organization, and there will be work for all. A club membership of two thousand means an assured population of 100,000 for Hamilton before half a decade. Thanking you for this space, I am, yours truly,

Ald. Applegath.
