DILLON'S TRIBUTE TO THE LIBERALS.

once more in the power of the Irish in Great Britain to strike a great blow for the liberty of their beloved motherland."

LORDS' POLITICAL NEWS. It is exceedingly difficult to arrive at an accurate estimate of the full strength of the two political parties in the upper House. The politics of some of their Lordships are not known, and the sympathies of another section are equally divided between Unionists and Liberals.

A careful analysis of the Lords' roll of membership, however, reveals the following figures, which while not accounting for all the Peers may be taken as indicating approximately the division of forces:

Conservatives and Unionists . . . 460
Liberals 110

THE REFORM PROPOSALS.

Many suggestions have been made from time to time for the reform of the House of Lords. Lord Russell and Lord Salisbury both formulated schemes for the creation of life peerages, but they found little favor. The latest and perhaps the best of the plant yet put forward is that adopted last year by the select committee of which Lord Rosebery was chairman.

The scheme of reorganization agreed upon was certainly remarkable considering the political opinions of its authors. Under the arrangements suggested the House of Lords would consist of about 330 members, comprising 13 Peers of the blood royal, 200 representatives elected by the Hereditary Peers, 130 qualified Hereditary Peers, 10 Spiritual Lords and 5 Lords of Appeal in Ordinary. To these must be added a possible annual increment of 4 Peers for life up to the number of 40, thus bringing the total number of the House to something under 400.

The failure to arrive at a satisfactory solution on this point may be considered by some people to detract from the value of the scheme drawn up by Lord Rosebery and his colleagues. Nevertheless, the suggested reform has its attractions. Whether it will ever be carried through is doubtful. But it stands before the country as convincing proof that those most intimately concerned are ready when opportunity occurs to make those changes in the constitution of the House which the advance of modern opinion seems to demand.

APPEALING TO NONCONFORMISTS.

While bargaining with Nationalists and Socialists, the Government is appealing in heated terms to the Non-conformists. This feature of the election programme was presented by Mr. Lloyd-George at the meeting of the two bodies known as the National Council of Evangelical Free Churches and the Metropolitan Free Church Federation—the political societies made up of churches from various Non-conformist sects. The meeting was opened with prayer and the singing of the hymn:

Speed the Cross through all the nations,
Speed the victories of Love,
Preach the gospel of redemption,
All its ancient power prove.

Then Lloyd-George called into the Church of England and the House of Lords with a view to forcing into action the Nonconformist conscience.

To the Established Church various wrongs were attributed, and the House of Lords was pictured as the enemy. Whatever grievance Nonconformity may suffer, whatever its claim, whatever its petition, it has got to bring it before a tribunal which is essentially biased, one-sided, prejudiced. That is our grievance." Here is one of the Lloyd-George flights of oratory.

"Our free constitution, everything that is best in our law, in our jurisprudence, in our constitution, was attributable to the efforts and sacrifices of the Nonconformists. Hume—no very partial historian to Nonconformity—admitted that the English owe their freedom in this land for any man to enter any place of worship it was because its door posts and its lintels were sprinkled with the blood of Nonconformists. (Cheers.) What do we claim? Fair play. Nothing more do we ask; nothing less will we take."

While the nation owes so much to Nonconformity, what is the attitude of the Lords towards them? "Do you think the peers love them? (Laughter.) Why should they? I believe in their hearts they put Primitive Methodists and poachers in the same category."

The meeting closed with the singing of the doxology.

CHAMBERLAIN'S MANIFESTO.

Tariff Reform the Only Alternative to the Budget.

London, Dec. 18.—Mr. Chamberlain has written a stirring manifesto on the political situation entitled "The National Crisis."

Mr. Chamberlain declares that tariff reform is the only alternative to the budget, and that it is better to abolish Cobdenism than to abolish the Constitution.

The following is the text of Mr. Chamberlain's preface: "When His Majesty's Ministers and their supporters came to the belated conclusion that the House of Lords meant business they changed their tune. They have since endeavored to convince themselves and others that the action of the Lords was unconstitutional and unwarranted."

They have shown it to be their object to fight the coming contest upon a false issue, and not upon the policy of tariff reform, which has made its evident impression upon the country, and which they desire to put aside.

It is our duty and interest to prevent this very obvious attempt to shift the ground. We know that for us it is intended to mean no advantage.

Tariff reform is the only alternative to the budget. This is now generally recognized. Nothing would be more satisfactory to our opponents than to put this issue altogether aside by raising new disputes to distract the mind of the electorate.

Consider what is the alternative. The supporters of the Government would sweep away all the constitutional usefulness of a Second Chamber. Apparently they intend to attempt the practical destruction of the House of Lords, and not its genuine amendment.

I need not say that any proposal of this kind is not likely to find favor with any sensible man. There is, on the contrary, a feeling that the Lords, in demanding that the whole question shall be submitted to the electorate, are acting within their powers and much to the advantage of the constituencies themselves.

If the vote at the coming elections were given in favor of the budget, not only would the new system of finance be accepted and extended in the future, but the House of Lords would be relegated to a position of impotence in face of the House of Commons. Once for all, the people of this country would find out that a chance majority of the House of Commons might at any time impose upon them their own ideas against the national will.

In the sense in which the word "reform" is described as a national crisis, "Two things, then, have clearly to be decided. mine, once for all, whether, in disregard of the experience of our own flesh and blood elsewhere throughout the English-speaking world, we, above all nations, can do without a Second Chamber. I do not think that our people are prepared for such a change as this, and I believe that a House of Commons entirely uncontrolled would be a great public danger. It would be much worse than the House of Lords, which, just because it is a hereditary Chamber, must depend for its whole strength and influence on its success in interpreting the true mind of the people.

The time has surely come for the tariff policy, which would promote British trade and welfare, instead of the budget policy, which, in every respect, would surrender our interests and our security to foreign rivals. It is better to abolish Cobdenism and not the Constitution; to pull down free imports and foreign privilege on our market and not the Second Chamber, whose only offence is in giving the nation a chance to speak for itself. Let the workers defend their work and stand by the peers, who in this case are standing by them. If the issue of tariff reform were submitted by itself there would be no doubt whatever of the reply. J. CHAMBERLAIN. Highbury, Birmingham.

Music and the Drama

It was a large audience that saw "The Lost Trail," a comedy drama of Western army life, at the Grand Opera House last evening. As a play and company of most pretensions, it came up to expectations, and seemed to please the theatre-goers. The principal roles were tolerably well enacted, and, everything considered, the show was well worth the price of admission.

CROWDS AT BENNETT'S.

If the Bennett Theatre keeps up the clip it started off with this week, the season's box office records will be broken. At the Monday and Tuesday performances the show pleased audiences that practically filled the theatre to capacity, while the advance sale for the New Year's performances assures the house being sold out before the curtain goes up. It would be difficult to have selected a more attractive headliner for the holiday bill than "The Bill Poster's Dream," the charming little offering in which dainty Adelaide is scoring such a big hit. The programme heralds the star as America's premier dancer. That may sound a little extravagant, but one does not have to watch the dainty little artist's nimble feet long to realize how exceptionally clever and graceful she really is. It is a well-arranged act, showing the bill poster snoring on top of a wall on which three little maids, attired in white overalls, are busy with paste brushes posting show bills. One of these is a large poster billing Adelaide. The figure suddenly comes to life, Adelaide steps down from the picture and performs a toe dance which adequately displays her ability as a remarkably clever dancer. Johnny Hughes, who plays the poster, does a very funny eccentric dance after tumbling off the wall. The entire company appears in the closing number, a very pleasing singing and dancing combination.

The Farrel-Taylor trio, in their clever musical number, will be here next week.

UNCLE TOM IS HERE.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" is being presented at the Grand this afternoon and evening. The performance is better than usual and the production quite a good one. The play will be repeated to-night and also to-morrow matinee and evening. Heretofore, Beecher Stowe's famous play seems to be as popular as ever.

"THE PRINCE CHAP."

Intensely dramatic at times and realistic in its style, the new play, "The Prince Chap," which will be presented at the Grand Friday evening and New Year's matinee and night. The story tells of the self-sacrifice of a young American artist in London, who, out of generosity of his heart assumes the care of the only daughter of a once famous model. The woman to whom the artist is engaged chooses to misrepresent the relationship between the child and her guardian, and with a view to a richer match, breaks the engagement. In the course of years her rich choice having died, she returns, anxious to take up her girlhood romance where she broke it off. In endeavoring to do this she reveals to her one-time lover the true nature of his affection for his ward, with the result that a charming and exquisite novel brings down the final curtain. "The Prince Chap" is said to represent the finest type of drama, clean and wholesome in every word.

"ST. ELMO."

A special matinee is to be given next Tuesday at "St. Elmo," the attraction at the grand next Monday and Tuesday, that will serve to introduce Vaughan Glaser, a young actor of excellent reputation. Mr. Glaser closed his New York engagement last Saturday night and came direct to Toronto, there he is presenting "St. Elmo" this week. The World, in speaking of the performance says: "Augusta Evans Wilson's famous novel has been dramatized by Ward Holcomb, who in four acts has pictured the story in its entirety. Everybody knows the story of the young Southern aristocrat, who lost his faith in man and woman because of the treachery of the woman whom he was to marry and of the man who was his best friend. One remembers the duel that followed and the bitterness that lasted through the years and his final redemption through the love of Edna Earl, the little barefoot girl who saved St. Elmo on the day of the duel. St. Elmo on the stage is just like St. Elmo in the book. If you fell in love with its romantic hero in book form you will love him just as well on the stage.

Mr. Glaser as St. Elmo Murray was in great form—free from overacting. His embodiment of the role is an admirable study. He denotes with skill the gradual changes in the vengeful, cynical, remorseless and inveterate woman hater, who at the last becomes the reformed and repentant man, living unselfishly and consecrated to good works.
