A NEGRO PREACHER IN SWEDEN.

A Great Curiosity to the Swedes, They flocked to see him.

The Rev. W. S. Brooks has returned to this city after an absence of two years. He had taken up his abode at St. Peter's African M. E. Church. After leaving this city Mr. Brooks went at once to Europe, visiting England, Norway, Sweden and Finland in turn. It is a question whether he was more interested in the interesting while traveling in Scandinavia and Finland. He certainly saw much that pleased and interested him, but his feelings probably were not to be compared with those of the Swedes when they saw a man of the new world visitor.

Mr. Brooks, it must be understood, is quite black and distinctly African in his features. Now many of the natives of the interior parishes in Sweden, Norway and Finland have not been twenty miles from home in their lives and the colored man is known to them only through books. Even the statements in the newspapers are not accepted with a grain of allowance by the most skeptical. When they heard that a black man would give a lecture in their neighborhood there was a great outpouring of the who's country, side to see this most extraordinary human being. Some walked as much as 100 miles to see him. Mr. Brooks has a great knowledge of Swedish, which he gained through a friend in Baltimore. He was able to carry on a conversation with the colored man in his own language. He was a great curiosity, and in many a life-long lecture, he made much to the amusement of Mr. Brooks, and when they did, many Swedes were attracted to see him. In his public addresses he spoke through an interpreter. He was very well received in Sweden, Norway and Finland. It was very gratifying to him.—Minneapolis (Minn.) Journal.

THE BEDOUINS.

Rife Etiquette and Early Hospitality of the Tribes of the Desert.

I heard that the Bedouins gave me the name of the walking Englishman and once or twice were kind enough to say that I was one of themselves. Tribes like these are important when dealing with men who have the minds of children. With them whether you are to live or die depends on you on a trifling matter. I have seen many Bedouins as possible in your favor. I wore their dress in my trip to Siwas, not with the idea of making myself noticeable, but of making myself unnoticeable at a distance. I generally walked in front of my men and camels. I did this because the incessant drone of the Arab songs became intolerable to me, and as I found Abdullah couldn't possibly get on without his eternal song, I used to put a mile between us when the track was clear.

Once or twice on reaching the bow of a sand hill, I would find myself in sight of a string of camels. The first thing the Bedouins would do was to hold their hands in front of their faces. They meant no harm. It is the ordinary etiquette of the desert, at which no one dreams of taking offense. Then I would have to sit down to show that I was no mischief-maker and conversation would be carried on in shouts. I generally asked them for a bowl of camel's milk, which they always gave if they had it. On one occasion I came upon a solitary Bedouin watching his herd of camels grazing. That man had probably not seen a human being for weeks. He was squatting on the ground. He neither moved nor turned his head. I asked him for milk, and he pointed to his camels and said, "Take it." As the art of milking camels never formed part of my school curriculum this invitation was of little use to me. But I could not refuse that man to more active hospitality. He probably looked upon my appearance as an impertinent intrusion.—Geographical Journal.

How Alaska Indians Trap Bears.

William B. O'Neil, who has been all over the world as one of the ichthyologists in the employ of the government, speaking of his experience in Alaska, said: "Strips of whalebone are folded into the shape of the letter 'N', enveloped in 'hunks' of fat and frozen that way. The fat thus prepared is left in promising spots for great white bears to devour. Along comes one of the monsters, gulping a lump down whole. The gastric juices melt the fat and eat away the strings of tendon with which the whalebone is bound, the whalebone springs off straight across the animal's stomach, and presently it dies. Next day Mr. Eskimo comes along and patters in a bear-skin worth several quarts of whisky."—Portland Oregonian.

A Man of Poor Judgment.

Gordon—So you think that Bentley is a man of poor judgment. How did you happen to come to that conclusion? Titcomb—I asked him to lend me $10 the other day. Gordon—And because he refused you question his judgment? Titcomb—Oh, no. He let me have it.—Boston Transcript.

Living in Paris in late years for persons of moderate means has been greatly simplified by the Bouillions Parisiens, which have succeeded the Druval restaurants. One can get a good dinner at these places for a small sum—far better than one finds at more expensive places in London.

She told me she wouldn't marry the best man in the world. What did you say? I told her that she didn't impugn my dignities.

PERSIAN RULER'S JEWELS.

Fabulous Tale of the Costly Gems in the Peacock Throne Room.

Who has not heard of the Persian jewels—their glory, their number, their priceless worth? When the doors were unlocked and I was taken into the peacock throne room, I found myself surrounded by a mass of wealth unequalled in the world. Nowhere are such treasures, but nowhere also is there such an accumulation of rubbish. I will, however, dismiss the rubbish and refer only to the treasures. Down each side of the room were chairs entirely covered with shoddy gold, and at intervals were tables of gold, nailed, I shuddered to note, with the commonest of black-headed larks.

At the far end of the room was the wonder of the world, the peacock throne. Whether it is one of the seven thrones of the great mogul and was brought from Delhi I don't know, but it is certainly the most costly ornament that the eye of man can look upon. I inspected it most carefully. It is entirely of silver, a great camp bed structure, but modeled in lovely designs. It is incrustated from end to end and from top to bottom with diamonds.

At the back is a mass of brilliant that makes you blink. The rug on which the shah sits is edged with precious stones, and the pillow on which he reclines is covered with pearls. I could keep on writing about the dazzling beauties of the throne of the king of kings, but I never could get beyond declaring it to be a superb jewel. Some people have valued it at $3,000,000. Its real value is between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. But, though the peacock throne is the magnificence of the other treasures. Who can attempt, however, to recount the number of bejeweled arms, the royal arms, the flashing aigrets, the trays filled with cut and uncut stones and the bowls filled with pearls that you can run through your fingers like a handful of rice? Every one has heard of the Daria-Nur, or Sea of Light, sister diamond to the Koh-i-noor, or Mountain of Light. Every one has also heard of the Globe of the World, made by the late shah of 70 pounds of pure gold and 5100 gems—the sea of emeralds, Persia of turquoises, India of amethysts, Africa of rubies, England and France of diamonds—and valued at $247,000.—Illustrated Magazine.
