

THE TEMPTATION.
CHAPTER XIX.

ANNABEL'S JOURNEY TO ENGLAND.
"It is very strange—very extraordinary," persisted Annabel.
"Well, if you think so, wait and say that to Mrs Langton. Only you'll have to go below now, and you had better not leave the cabin again till we are at the landing place."
In silent fear and perplexity Annabel returned to the close and unsavory place where she had passed the night; and an hour later Dick brought her coffee and bread for breakfast, which, however, she scarcely tasted.
Hour after hour passed in silent monotony, during which the lugger seemed to be moving lazily to and fro in the water; but Annabel waited in vain for intelligence that the voyage was ended. Thus the whole day passed, until dark again drew near, when her suspense grew so great that she could remain where she was no longer, and again issued forth with the intention of going on deck.
But she was not allowed to get quite so far, for at the head of the companionway stood Dick. He might have been there accidentally on purpose, but whether or no he now barred her progress.
"What now, Miss?" he growled, looking fiercely down upon her.
"Are we never to land, Dick?" asked the fair girl with undisguised anxiety.
"Oh, yes, we are coming near it now. An hour or two at most will set us ashore. Just keep where you are and have patience."
Thus rebuffed she was obliged to retire again into solitude and darkness—for the lamp was not lighted as on the previous evening—and make an effort to exorcise that patience which Dick recommended.
The latter had spoken the truth when he said that they would be ashore in an hour or two. The lugger was now really standing in for the land, which could be dimly seen in the twilight not a mile away. It seemed to be a wild and thinly inhabited part of the coast, for no twinkling lights could be seen, and no sound of man or beast was borne from it over the water.
The lugger might easily have run ashore in a quarter of an hour, but this did not seem to be the intention of those who guided her, for when she had been brought almost under the shadow of the rocks she suddenly tacked and stood out again. This was done several times, by which manœuvring the shore was skirted for a mile or two, and all the while Dick stood at the side, close to the head of the cabin stair, keenly watching the shore, and now and then giving directions to the Captain, who in turn delivered them to the men at the helm.
More than one of the two hours mentioned by Dick had thus been consumed, and for some time it had been quite dark. Suddenly a light gleamed out from behind a shelving rock, and was moved to and fro in a peculiar way, as if in signal. It was immediately answered from the bow of the lugger, which lay to, and measures were taken for the lowering of the boat.
The light had by this time descended to the cabin, where Annabel sat in utter darkness.
"Now, Miss, here we are at last—They are getting the boat out that is to take us ashore."
Not an instant did Annabel delay. Almost Dick had uttered the words she was by his side, and followed him with animated step up the cabin stair. The boat was by this time in the water, and they were handling the luggage into it.
By the same rope ladder which she had ascended on coming on board, Annabel again made her way, over the side, where Dick was ready to receive her and place her in the stern. The same men who had rowed them from the beach at Flushing were ready seated with the oars out, and Dick having pushed the boat away from the side of the lugger, they proceeded towards the dark and silent shore.

GREAT BOAT RACE.—A great boat race, for one thousand dollars a side, took place on the Tyne on Wednesday, April 16th. The race, which had been originally intended to be rowed on the previous Saturday, was put off in order that the delegates to the Annual Congress of Co-operative Societies (held this year in Newcastle), might see that peculiarity of Tyneside skill and stamina. This involved a new contract between the men, and all bets had to be re-made. The competitors were Robert Bagnall and John Bright, the two "coming" oarsmen of the Tyne. The race was in open boats over four miles of water. Bagnall, who rowed with wonderful fairness, won only by a length, and had the race been twenty yards further, John Bright would have had it, as Bagnall sank down in the boat the moment he reached the goal. It was deemed the most gallant race ever seen on the Tyne, and Bright's pluck was considered so worthy his great name that a testimonial will be made to him.
It is said that in Scotland one man in every thousand goes to college; in Germany the proportion is one in every 2,000; in England it is one in every 5,800.

THOUSANDS OF PROMISING YOUTHS, of both sexes go down to untimely graves, from general debility and weakness, who might be saved by fortifying their systems with Iron. The Puritan Syrup is an Iron Tonic prepared expressly to supply this vitalizing element, and is the only preparation of iron that will assimilate at once with the blood.
BREAKFAST.—EPH'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of the human and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Dr. Cassell's Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London."
MANUFACTURE OF COCOA.—We will now give an account of the process adopted by Messrs. James Epps & Co., manufacturers of Cocoa Tablets, at their works in the Euston Road, London. See article in Cassell's Household Guide, p. 206.
Mr. JAMES I. FELLOWS, Manufacturing Chemist.—Sir: For several months past I have used your Compound Syrup in the treatment of Incipient Phthisis, Chronic Bronchitis, and other affections of the Chest, and I have no hesitation in stating that it ranks foremost amongst the remedies used in those diseases. Being an excellent nervous tonic, it exerts a direct influence on the nervous system, and through it it invigorates the body. It affords me pleasure to recommend a remedy which is really good in cases for which it is intended, when so many advertised are worse than useless. I am, Sir, Yours truly, Z. S. EARLE, Jr., M.D. St. John, N. B., January, 1869.
