The colonial premiers are receiving hospitality and attentions without end, but there is no practical evidence that definite progress has been made in the direction of imperial federation. Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Goschen have een conferring with them, and many questions have been informally discussed, but the conviction is gaining ground that the general problem is beyond the range of practical politics under existing conditions. Mr. Chamberlain virtually admitted this in his speech at the Cordwainers' banquet, then he spoke of the Australian confederation and a similar movement in South Africa as policies which might open the way for imperial federation. ed, the atmosphere for imperial unity but this is not yet any definite proof that new institutions have taken root ity. The heartiness with which the premiers have been welcomed ought not to be underrated. It has promoted an era of good feeling in which anything short of the miraculous may be brought about in the relations of the mother state and the colonies. It has been a genuine English welcome, with Sir Wilfrid Laurier as the chief guest of honor. At the New Zealand dinner to Premier Seddon, an exciting dance of Maoris, stripped to the waist and grotesquely dressed and ut no melodramatic accessories have been needed to stimulate public in-terest in the colonial guests.
