AMERICANIZING CANADA.

J. Hall Richardson, writing to the Fortnightly Review (London, Eng.), discusses the stringency of the Canadian immigration laws, which he considers have the effect of reducing the number of British emigrants, while they do not interfere to the same extent with people coming from the United States. Of course, he tacitly admits that the restrictions are really against "undesirables," and that, consequently, none of this class are to be found among British emigrants than among those from the United States.

The point he is trying to emphasize, however, is that Canada prefers immigrants from the United States to those from Britain; that consequently instead of Canada remaining a British country the time will soon come when the majority of our people will be of foreign birth and descent, and that the Dominion will actually become Americanized.

It is not a fact that Canadians prefer immigrants from the United States and dislike those from England. We want good men from wherever they come; there is not much doubt that we would prefer to have the good men come from the mother country. But if British magistrates and philanthropic societies try to unload their feeble and criminal classes on us, we certainly do not want them, and much prefer suitable men from other European countries, as well as from the United States.

We want the men with the will and the ability to work; the men whose energy, industry and sobriety will make them successful settlers. We have some of that class from Britain; send us more, and they will be heartily welcome. Any dissatisfaction felt in Canada with regard to a British immigrant is not because he is British, but because he is no good.

It is true, however, that we welcome the immigrants from the United States, but that is not simply because they come from that country, but because they are, as a class, good men. They are not the undesirable men from large cities; they are hardy sons of the soil from the Western States, who know how to work, and who are willing to work. Most of them are men with some means, as is evidenced by the fact that during the past year they brought with them $52,000,000 in cash and settlers' goods. We want this class; we welcome them heartily; would welcome them still more heartily if they came from our motherland.

The fear that this increasing immigration from the United States will Americanize Canada we believe to be unfounded. In the first place a large proportion of this immigration is really Canadian. Some years ago there was an exodus from Canada to the United States. Large numbers of our people settled in the Northwestern States. They went there because the opportunities for advancement seemed greater. While they doubtless succeeded in bettering themselves for the time, yet, with the development of our own Northwest, their hopes and wishes turn their feet homeward, and they are flocking back to the shelter of the old flag.

Apart from that, however, immigrants to a new country soon become assimilated, if they are any good. The successful man becomes content with his surroundings; it is the unsuccessful immigrant who is dissatisfied and wants to change things.

Good men coming into Canada will be successful, and, therefore, content—no matter from whence they come. Even if they come from the United States they will be satisfied. They will find government, laws, social and moral conditions are as good as they left; we believe even better. Instead of Americanizing Canada it will not be long before they are thoroughly Canadianized, and may, indeed, become more intensely British than some native Canadians.

We have no fear of any evil influence that good immigrants may have on our morals, our religion, or our loyalty. At all events we are quite willing to run the risk.

THE C. P. R. REACHING OUT.

The announcement recently made by Second Vice-President Whyte, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, that the grain route between the west and St. John, N. B., is to be shortened, is of much importance. This is to be brought about by the construction of a line to Duluth, connecting the Canadian Pacific Soo line with the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic, which runs along the south shore of Lake Superior, and, like the Soo and old Chicago Great Western, is controlled by the Canadian Pacific. The intention is to construct over one-third of the new line, which will be three hundred miles in length, this year. With such a big cut-off as this line will form, the Canadian Pacific will possess the shortest grain route from Winnipeg to the Atlantic, while its main line along the north shore of Lake Superior—the most difficult part of the big railway to operate owing to the blizzards which sweep along that shore—will be relieved of the pressure resulting from its rapidly developing traffic. While a portion of the grain traffic eastward will continue via Fort William and the north shore of Lake Superior, much of it will be carried over the south shore from Winnipeg, via Duluth, taking the Canadian Pacific main line again at Sudbury. As the shortest route from the western prairies to a Lake Superior port, the C. P. R. naturally expects to hold a large share of lake freight in the summer, when the company's steamers are busy with the commerce which can be carried more economically by water than by rail. Besides, being the shortest and most direct route from Winnipeg to Duluth, the new line will also serve an important grain belt at present without adequate transportation facilities.

As the St. John, Telegraph points out, considered from any standpoint, the shortening of the haul from the west is an important consideration to the farmer of the west, and the shipper of the east. Mr. Whyte's announcement goes to show that the Canadian Pacific is steadily reaching out for business, taking advantage of all the short cuts likely to increase its traffic and at the same time endeavoring to strengthen its position in both the west and the east. By securing a port on the eastern shore of Georgian Bay and obtaining an entry into Duluth, the great railway will be in a position to handle grain both expeditiously and cheaply.

A WET AND DRY TOWN.

[Memphis Appeal.]
As most of our readers know, the boundary line between Tennessee and Virginia runs right through the flourishing town of Bristol; so that one-half of the place is in Tennessee and the other half in Virginia. The prohibition law passed by the recent Tennessee legislature, of course, only the Tennessee half of Bristol. It does not affect Bristol, Va. From this singular condition of affairs looms a strange possibility. If Bristol, Va., can be made wet, the liquor people feel that they can make it a great whisky and beer emporium, from which they can conveniently supply the entire state of Tennessee with its liquid refreshments.

LEMIEUX ACT SCORES AGAIN.

[Hamilton Times.]
Hon. Mr. Lemieux has again the satisfaction of seeing a great strike prevented and good feeling between employers and employees brought about by the excellent measure which bears his name. There will be no strike of the employees of the Dominion Textile Company, an amicable settlement of all points of dispute having been brought about by the board of conciliation. In a letter to the labor department, Mr. Gibeault, president of the Federation of Textile Workers, says: "This is a striking demonstration of the value of the Lemieux act for with-out this law I believe there would have been a long continued strike. There is a vast economy in this method of settling labor disputes. Even more important is its effect in securing justice and preserving good feeling."

FOR THE FOURTH.

[Chicago Record-Herald.]
The fireworks factories and storehouses are beginning to blow up, thus indicating that this year's glorious Fourth is pretty sure to be about as unsafe and insane as any that have preceded it. Blowing up of fireworks repositories always constitutes one of the disagreeable preliminaries.

MORLEY, THE LEVEL-HEADED.

[Buffalo Courier.]
Lord Morley—the John Morley of other days—is one of the few surviving English statesmen who have not lost their heads in the panic over the "German peril." It was a high public service for him to say at this time to the imperial press congress that the English tongue is a stronger and more enduring bond of imperial union than anything else—a thousand times stronger than the achievements of soldiers and sailors and the statesmen who direct them. It requires courage these days for a public man to make a declaration like that.

CANADIANS NOT FICKLE.

[Montreal Star.]
One of the "sights" which Lord Rosebery told his audience they might see in Canada was that "under the most advanced democracy a prime minister may hold his own against the successive buffets of innumerable general elections." Canada has certainly given the world an example of stability of government joined to breadth of franchise. Sir John Macdonald ruled for thirteen years and his party for five more. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has ruled for thirteen years, while Sir Oliver Mowat governed Ontario as long as he chose to "stay on the job." Our fault is not fickleness, at all events.

PROSPERITY AND BUOYANCY.

[Winnipeg Free Press.]
The increase in the customs revenue of 1909 over that of 1908 signifies a return of prosperity, but it signifies also a renewed buoyancy of the Dominion revenue. The excess of revenue over expenditure last financial year was the smallest in twelve years, and it is already evident that the surplus for the financial year 1909-10 will show a marked improvement. This is a fortunate showing, as it comes at a time when partisan efforts are making to disparage the Dominion's credit in London, where Canadian securities are almost exclusively held.

ENGLISH CAN'T SEE IT

Carnegie's Plan to Limit Armaments Doesn't Cause a Ripple.

London, June 14.—Andrew Carnegie made a very brief stay in London on his arrival from Paris and, after receiving the freedom of two provincial townships in recognition of his munificence, he betook himself to his beloved Skibo Castle in Scotland.

The comments on Mr. Carnegie's suggestion that the United States take the initiative in bringing about a limitation of European armaments sufficiently indicated the view taken of the proposal here, and only one of the weekly papers even refers to the proposal any more.

The paper in question devotes two and a half columns to showing that were President Taft to act on Mr. Carnegie's suggestion, it would produce even a greater state of mistrust and disquiet than exists now.

Mrs. Emily Park Requa, whose knee was so badly injured in a railway accident that she had since been unable to kneel in prayer, has been awarded $2,000 damages against the New York Central Railroad.

PACHMANN SO WILD HAS TO BE WATCHED

"Monkey Tricks" Believed To Be Works of Genius No More.

London, June 14.—Vladimir Pachmann, the great pianist whose eccentricities are as well known in New York as in London, has now become so wild in his habits that he is accompanied everywhere by a friend—some people are bold enough to call "the friend" a "keeper."

Many music lovers have cherished the idea that Pachmann's "monkey tricks" at the piano were merely the pose of genius, but of late it is certain that the pianist has become so irresponsible in his actions that he has to be most carefully watched.

The other day he was present, as one of the audience, at a concert given at the Aeolian Hall, and his remarks and interruptions were so loud and frequent that the management requested him to leave the place, and he was gently guided out by his friend. His remarks were entirely favorable to the young artist who happened to be performing, but they greatly interfered with the enjoyment of the audience.
