come. But as you and uncle are kind enough to tell me that I have not, I will stay; and thank you, too, as the girl said to the boy that asked her to have him.

"And don't take it into your head again, Dick, that you are wearing out your welcome. When we get tired of you, Dick, I will take it upon myself to send you about your business."

"Very well, Anna. I hope you will do so."

In truth, Dick had enough to keep him in the neighborhood. Hammond House and Hammondville, forming the greater portion of the landed estate he had recently inherited lay within a few miles of Old Lyon Hall.

25c a Box. COLEMAN MEDICINE CO., Toronto

The whole place was now in charge of a resident bailiff who was instructed to put it in thorough repair for the reception of its new master. And these repairs were going on as fast as circumstances would permit.

The outdoor work was of course frequently suspended during the inclemency of the weather. But the house was fitted with carpenters, plumbers, painters, and paperhangers.

And it was well that Dick should occasionally ride there to overlook these workmen. The most careful instructions are not often carried out, under these circumstances without the frequent presence of the master.

It was thought expedient also that Anna, whose home it would sometime be, should be taken into the counsels and accompany Dick in his visits of inspection to Hammond House. And whenever the weather permitted she went there with him.

Hammond House was not to be their permanent home however. During the life of General Lyon, they were to live at Old Lyon Hall.

Three times a week, when the mail came into Saultsburg and the letters and papers were brought to Old Lyon Hall, Drusilla turned to the ship-news. At length she saw announced the safe arrival of the Erie at Liverpool. And then she knew that was the last of even indirect news to her of Alexander.

But she was not depressed on that account. Her faith, hope and love were strong. Everybody was very good to her. Her baby boy was growing in strength, beauty and intelligence.

The spring was to be early this year. The latter days of February were bright and lovely harbingers of its quick approach.

In the midst of the days Drusilla took her baby out for short drives around the park—the nursery dragging the little carriage and the mother walking by its side, and Leo often following to open gates or remove obstacles.

There was not unfrequently a high dispute between the brother and sister as to who would take care of the baby.

Leo insisted that as the baby was a boy, it was his right to have charge of him, and declared that he could see no fitness at all in a girl being entrusted to nurse a boy.

Drusilla, much as she was fond of a male nurse never was heard of either for male or female child.

Leo would then bring forward his mistress's promise that he himself should have a good time with little Master Leonard, riding him about on his shoulder.

Drusilla would request him to give that piece of information to the "horse marines," who might be credulous enough to believe his story. As for herself, she rejected it totally and held fast to her own rights as sole nurse by appointment of her mistress.

Through all these quarrels one fact was evident. Drusilla was the brother and sister to the young child and his mother, of whom it might almost be said that their servants were ready to lay down their lives in their service.

Drusilla had not given up her favorite project of purchasing Cedarwood. She had written and instructed her attorneys to make overtures to the present proprietors of the place, for that purpose. She told them that she knew of some people who had no recently purchased the property would want a very handsome bonus before they would consent to part with it again as soon, and that she was prepared to satisfy their demands, as she preferred to pay an exorbitant price for the place rather than miss its possession.

Her attorneys, who were long-headed men of business in no way to sentiment or extravagance, wrote in reply that they hoped with a little patience and good management, to buy the estate at something like a fair valuation.

So Drusilla agreed to wait.

Meanwhile General Lyon had not forgotten that he had promised to purchase Cedarwood, and bestow it upon Drusilla as a New Year's present. And he also set about negotiating for this purpose.

This reached the ears of Drusilla's lawyers, who immediately wrote to ask her if she was aware that her uncle, also, was after the place.

Drusilla was not aware of the fact but now that she heard of it, she of course understood that the General could only be seeking it for her sake.

So she went to the old gentleman and assured him that as much as she loved him, she could not possibly receive so magnificent a present from his hands, but very much desired to purchase the estate with her own funds.

General Lyon laughed, and assured her that his only motive in trying to buy Cedarwood was to keep his word to her; but that, if she released him from it, he was ready to give up the project. For he was well aware, he said, that to bestow property on a lady who owned warehouses piled with merchandise in Baltimore and San Francisco, and merchant ships at sea trading to all parts of the world, besides bank deposits and railway shares in almost every State and gold mines in California, to bestow a little bit of property on such a millionaire would simply be to send cables to "Newcastle."

So the General wrote and stopped the proceedings of his lawyers.

And Drusilla wrote and told him to go about as fast as they saw it. But it was April before any measure of importance was taken. Then Messrs. Henegge & Kent, who had been as active and as artful as Drusilla in the business, wrote to inform their client that they had discovered that the present proprietor of Cedarwood, who was a person of very restless disposition, and unsettled habits, had become dissatisfied with the place and was anxious to dispose of it, and would do so immediately if he could sell it for as much as he gave for it. Now, as Alexander Lyon had sold the estate at some sacrifice during his fit of fury, it was therefore supposed to be a good bargain. The lawyers wrote to ask further instructions from their client.

Your Fingers, Madam, are First to Touch Five Roses

Last week at a five o'clock tea a young hostess exclaimed: "I do love to make cake; it makes my hands so clean!" And she ate her cakes alone.

Did you ever consider, Madam, why the best surgeons wear rubber gloves when performing a critical operation? They say it's impossible to so wash the hands that they will be absolutely free from danger of germ-infection.

How many hands, think you, have handled the flour you are NOW using.

Out in the sun-flooded Keewatin mill, Mistress Housewife, we make a flour which never comes in contact with hand or finger.

"FIVE ROSES" is the name you know it under.

It is an automatic water-power plant which makes this cleanly flour, under the eye—but not under the hand—of milling experts with 21 years of "know-how" behind them.

From field to sack and barrel every bit of machinery that FIVE ROSES touches is bright and polished like those piano keys of yours.

Then the fleckless purity in preparation, Madam.

Special devices exclusive to FIVE ROSES are employed so that no hand need come in contact with your flour.

It's hand proof—germ-free—pregnant with health and wholesomeness. Different from any other flour made, you see.

For nearly one mile FIVE ROSES travels through hygienic automatic processes, getting cleaner and finer the while, until in the cheery packing room it flows in a clear creamy stream into sacks and barrels of our own make.

Here likewise purity is paramount, and the high-grade quality packages are filled full-weight by infallible machinery and sealed by automatic process.

All this for your folks' protection and yours, Mistress Housewife. So that your own white hands are the first to touch FIVE ROSES, even from the time it was hidden in the heart of the field-ripened Manitoba berries until delivered in your kitchen.

You know this positively when you read "FIVE ROSES" on the label. Because it is an absolute guarantee of purity backed by a responsible company whose fair reputation is at stake in every sack.

Are you particular enough to look for the name, Mistress Housewife? Strong-willed enough to insist on getting what you ask for? That's FIVE ROSES.
