HEALTHY HORSES

The horse has but one stomach, and has but one chance at his food, so it is absolutely necessary to extract the largest amount of good from the food in its rapid passage through the stomach. As a rule, horses are either overworked or underworked, and it suffers much from impaired digestion. This is followed by stagnation of the blood and a whole host of diseases. No trouble should be too great, to get and keep him in good shape for his every day work. Clydesdale Stock Food, with its ordinary feed, regulates his whole system by aiding the digestion, regulating the bowels, stimulating and correcting the action of the liver, loosening the hide, giving sleekness to the coat, and your horse will do more work and on less feed. It can be stopped at any time without bad results. Mr. D. B. McEachern, Harrison, Ont., says: "I have used your Clydesdale Stock Food for the last six months in my stable, and I find it is the best tonic I have ever used, and it is the only tonic that when using, I can stop at any time without bad results, and my horses will not lose in flesh like they will with other Stock Foods. No better remedies on the market than Clydesdale Heave Cure, Colic Cure, Worm Powder, Gall Cure, Embrocation Liniment and Tar Foot Remedy; they should be kept handy. You never can tell when they may be needed. If the above preparations are not found satisfactory your money will be refunded cheerfully by our dealers in your district, namely:

EARN A Comfortable Living WITH A Chatham Incubator.

Poultry raising with a Chatham Incubator is a very profitable and easily managed occupation. It needs but little of your time, unless you wish to go into it extensively. You cannot raise chickens successfully with a setting hen. She is wasting the time when she should be laying. While she is hatching and brooding a few chickens she could be laying five or six more eggs. The percentage of chicks she hatches is much less than that produced by the Chatham Incubator. It will pay you to own a Chatham Incubator.

The Household.

THE MOTHER'S STRIKE.

Such a dream I had! So dreadful
That I never heard the like:
For I dreamt that on a sudden
The mammae sacred to strike.

"We are tired," I heard them murmur,
"Tired of working night and day,
And not always hearing 'Thank you!'
Such long hours and such poor pay!"

So they would not mend the jackets,
Nor the holes in stockings small;
No one ran to kiss the babies
When poor Tommy sought a fall.

No one bound up wounded fingers,
No one glued the broken toys,
No one answered all the questions
Of the eager little boys.

No one tied the little bonnets,
No one brushed the little curls;
No one sewed the little dresses,
For the busy little girls.

No one heard their little troubles,
No one held them on her lap,
No one sewed on button buttons,
No one hunted Johnny's cap.

And there were no bedtime stories,
And no faving hands to tuck,
Blankets soft round little sleepers,
For their mothers all had struck.

O, so lonesome and so dreadful
And so queer it all did seem!
Aren't you glad, dear little children,
It was nothing but a dream?

A HOUSEHOLD AID COMPANY.
A group of women in Boston are trying to get at the domestic problem in a new way. The Domestic Economy Committee of the Women's Education Association has started a "Household Aid Company," the central idea of which is to bring together the housekeeper and the household worker on a business basis that shall be satisfactory to both, to make household work desirable for young women now deterred from entering it by certain features considered objectionable, and to put within reach of the housekeeper the services of more intelligent and able workers.

The company offers an eight weeks' course in training, which includes instruction in simple cooking, marketing, table and parlor work, cleaning, school education or its equivalent, etc. "Aids" must have a grammar must be seventeen years old, and must furnish certificates of good character and good health.

It is intended to give the plan a two years' trial, during which it is hoped to have in the company's house, for residence and training, a number of young women whose intelligence and ability are beyond those of the average domestic, and to have them go out by the day or hour for household work, returning in the evening. The price per hour is graduated according to the work done, and is not less than twenty cents per hour.

John's Corner.

A MEMORY AND A MEMENTO.

"Harper's Weekly" tells a story of an Irish couple in Boston who, despite a comparatively happy married life, were wont to have violent misunderstandings. Nevertheless, the pair were devoted to each other, and when the husband died, not long ago the widow was inconsolable.

Shortly after the funeral a friend who had dropped in to see how Mrs. Milligan was getting on, chanced to remark:

"Well, there's one blessing, Maggie, for they do say that poor Mike died happy."

"Indeed he did," responded the widow. "The dear lad! The last thing he did was to crack me over the head with a medicine bottle." A Philadelphia correspondent in sending the above relates an incident that came under her own observation while visiting a poor family whose head and father had been killed in a railroad accident.

"The widow was in great distress and crying piteously, when her little six-year-old son, running about the room, tripped and fell over a good-sized stick lying on the floor. 'Willie,' she rather compassionately biting her face from her handkerchief, 'set the stick in the corner, darling. You'll want to save it, for it was the last one your poor dear father thrashed you with.'"

A TALE OF A TUB.

The two pretty American girls had met two delightful Englishmen on the way across and had given a cordial invitation, warmly seconded by their mother, to Sir Charles and his friend to visit them at their country home.

One day a message came saying the two men would arrive that afternoon. The family was thrown into a fever of excitement, and many plans of entertainment for their guest were suggested and abandoned. It was finally decided that, as Englishmen are notoriously fond of a "tub" and their guests were coming directly from the train, they should first be invited to take a bath. After that the hostess would rely on the inspiration of the moment.

The young men arrived promptly, and after some demurring were hurried off to the bathroom. In about an hour they emerged and went immediately to their rooms, saying, "We are sorry to have so soon, but we only came to make a call, and our train leaves in fifteen minutes."

NO ESCAPE.
(Harper's Weekly.)
The following telephone conversation is reported to have been heard between a certain well-known young financier and a society girl who was considerably tipsy.
