

always love more; often we love too little. We will not follow them to their new home. We can imagine their voyage, picture the welcomes accorded by true friends on the other side. We can even picture their future life. It was well with them, for God was with them.

