parties have their oral tradition; and very few persons are there who do not, as a matter of fact, interpret the Scriptures according to the oral tradition to which they have been accustomed. But our modern oral tradition is manifold and contradictory; that of the primitive ages was, on all important points, one and the same. They might not agree in their interpretation of the Old Testament, but they did, for the most part, agree in the interpretation of the North Contract pretation of the New; and at all events they held one unvarying system of doctrine. Can any serious minded Person suppose that minds distracted by varying systems of doctrine, such as we are condemned to hear, can be so well qualified to understand the Bible as those who were trained in a system which was uniform and consistent? Unless, indeed, any one is prepared to assert that the system delivered by the Apostles, vanished from the earth with them, and that it was left for a few persons or 1600 years after, in a different country, speaking a different language, to extract this lost doctrine anew from the writings of the Apostles, composed in a foreign tongue, and that a dead one, newly and imperfectly recovered by a few learned men. If such hypothesis as that is supposed credible, I have nothing more to say. But some several contractions are the supposed credible, I have nothing more to say.

But some may say that the minds of the Primitive Christians were warped and perverted by previous prejudices. Granted; most freely granted. They were Perverted by all sorts of former prejudices. One, previous to his conversion, was a Sadducean Jew, another a Pharisaic Jew, another an Essenian Jew; others were worshippers of fire or of the stars, ow believers in two eternal principles; others were Friedmann or Pharisaic Jew, and the stars, or believers in two eternal principles; others were Friedmann or Pharisaic and Principles. shippers of fire or of the stars, or believers in principles; others were Epicureans or Stoics, or Platonists, or Academics, or Eclectics; others again were Druids, or worshippers of Thor and Woden; some were rhetoricians, lawyers, soldiers, philosophers, courtiers; others mere illiterate idolaters. And yet with all these various and contrary prejudices, when they become Christians is gradually extending among us, yet in its general character it is much milder than it was when it visited our city in the scottish Reformers Gazette.—We will illustrate this motter by the course of events now or lately going on in Ireland. The Whigs put down the rebellion there, thanks to be stion of deaths is smaller. These facts this forces and to the allegiance of the better part of the Irish people. Mr. Smith O'Brien and his fellow-leaders in the rebellion, have been tried and convicted. The House of Commons next week ult it may be to see at first how the ancient interpretations are consistent with the apparent meaning of other Parts of Scripture, my mind cannot resist this over-whelming fact; that there is but one interpretation of cer-tain passages of Scripture in the ages nearest the Apostles, and the convertion is at various with the doctrine a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God." Now, can any person specify any method by which a person can be born of water and of the Spirit any method by which a person can be born of water and of the Spirit any method by which a person can be born of water and of the Spirit any method by which a person can be born of water and of the Spirit and Spirit a Inched by which a person can be born by water that of the Spirit, unless in baptism? Does not the Church of England expressly quote this very passage at the commencement of the Baptismal service, as a proof of that regeneration which she declares to be "by baptism?" posing, then, that there is another meaning to the phrase—to be born again—supposing that it may be applied to a different spiritual charge, it yet appears that to be baptized and to be born again are the same thing; or, at all events, that it is in the of the water of baptism that we are to be, that it is in the of the water of baptism that we are to look for regeneration by the Spirit. Some, indeed, would make the word "and" explanatory, "Requirement to coen; as though our Lord had said be born of water, even of the Spirit." not to dwell on the unnaturalness of such an inter-tion) when our Lord spoke of his disciples being ptized with the Holy Ghost and with fire," does any suppose that he made fire equivalent to the Holy to Were they not baptized both with the Holy st and with fire? me, again, separate the two, and teach a regeneration with water, and a regeneration with the Holy Ghost aking place, in most instances, at separate times. But there a single trace of any such doctrine in the New Testament or in the early Church? Does the Church ngland in any of her writings, even in the popular and less studied style of the Homilies, ever teach a rege deration by water? Is washing with water ever spoken as a regeneration of any kind? Is the body anywhere spoken of as being capable of being born again, or the whole man must be born again, whole man remains out of the Kingdom of Good be born again of the Spirit, or the body remain along with it in the sight of God. It is by the God's sight; and the soul can be quickened by ng but the Holy Spirit.

If this appears to me self-evident. If it is not so to the self-evident, If it is not so to the self-evident, I will simply add that the writers of the Primitive of the whole Church of Christ the self-evident is not so to the self-evident. down to the time of the Reformation, uniformly and with the consent, and in passages without number, interpret this passages without number, and to passages without number, and the consent and the consent are the consent and the consent are the consent and the consent are the consent a as it were" at first, and afterwards without it) to express a change of heart or of conduct; but such instances, as I have said, are very rare; nor does this affect the fact that they interpret this passage of baptism, and of baptism aloue. If any person has any doubt from the subject, I can only wish that he may search for himself. There will be very few persons indeed, to entirely wrapped up in the prejudices of a lifetime, as to come to a different conclusion. But as I have already ome to a different conclusion. But, as I have already it appears to me entirely unnecessary for any person will allow his own mind fair play, to have recourse to any interpreter. The passage itself is transparently

Taking this passage, then, in its plainest sense, our ord's conversation with Nicodemus is easily understood. It comes to Jesus by stealth, and yet as one who thought was doing him an honour by visiting him. He comes, course, with the Jewish notion, that he is already one look of specific and the look of of God's people and children, and that when "the Christ" des, he in common with all his countrymen, will have are in the Kingdom of God; that is, in the revival of emporal kingdom of David and Solomon under the He sees in Jesus a teacher come from God, and hes to consult him in regard to the kingdom of God therefore commences by paying him the compliment acknowledging his miracles and Divine commission. moment Jesus sees through the state of his mind, and gs him to the point much more speedily than he cted, and in a very different way. He desires at and effectually to remove from his mind the delusion the earthly nature of God's kingdom, and his own atural right to share in it. He gives him to under-tand that his natural descent from Abraham is not sufhe requires a second birth—that it is spiritual and ome from God-that it is to be obtained by an nal ordinance, and consequently by an outward to profession. "Except a man be born again, he can-see the kingdom of God." "Except a man be born water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingof God." His natural birth leaves him still carns the new birth will give him a spiritual life, which him to enter into a spiritual kingdom. "That is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born

Nicodemus does not understand. Although the dews baptized proselytes with water and then reckoned newly born, even this does not give him a glimpse our Lord's meaning. Well might Jesus remonstrate, art thou a Master of Israel, and knowest not these

SIR,-Some time ago I ventured to make some remarks on the non-contagious nature of Cholera. I beg to hand to you a Report of the Medical Council of the Sanatory Committee of New York; and I trust that a perusal of this document will tend to re-assure our Clergy and others whose attendance on Cholera patients may be required either from duty or affection. It can hardly be necessary, at the same time, to urge on them the advantage of the committee of the tage of paying proper attention to themselves, as regards clothing and diet, and the avoidance of fatigue and exposure to cold and wet.

Bogle's Hyperion Fluir,—We have repeatedly spoken in favour of this celeb ated article for the hair, and from the praise of those who have used it, we believe were fully justified in doing so; we therefore cheerfully give place to the following from the agent in Worcester:—
"The sale of the Hyperion increases, and we are confident, will supersede all the other preparations in use. We herewith enclose eyou a certificate, as one of the many proofs of its entire, successa:

"This may certify, that nearly eight months since I lost all my hair and for six months my head, was, entirely bailt; at the end of thar time, I purchased a bottle of Begle's Hyperion Fhuld of D. Scott, Jr. & Co. the agents in Worcester. Since then, I have used it regularly and strictly according to directions, in consequence, of which the hair has started all over my head—It is now about an inch long, and growing rapidly.
