

much as is consistent with the aims of an information agency. Community information centres, libraries, church groups, etc., should be repositories of government pamphlets and should be a source to which people can turn for initial information on government policies, programs and services, supplied regularly and routinely by Information Canada through the use of mail and/or telephone facilities. These local organizations should, in turn, be encouraged to make maximum use of the Enquiry Centre in their area.