Nº 52. The IDLER.

tifications must be fometimes with-held; he that complies with all lawful defires will certainly lose his empire over himfelf, and in time either submit his reason to his wishes, and think all his defires lawful, or difmiss his reason as troublesome and intrufive, and resolve to fnatch what he may happen to wish, without enquiry about right and wrong.

No man, whose appetites are his masters, can perform the duties of his nature with strictness and regularity; he that would be fuperior to external influences must first become superior to his own passions.

WHEN the Roman General, fitting at fupper with a plate of turnips before him, was follicited by large promifes to betray his truft, he afked the meffengers whether he that could fup on turnips was a man likely to fell his country. Upon him who has reduced his fenfes to obedience temptation has loft its power, he is able to attend impartially to virtue, and execute her commands without hefitation.
