

This is reception day for out-of-town people. We're ready with elaborate displays for the entertainment of visitors, including all the latest style ideas in—with Furs, of course, the leading interest. The Dineen name on hat or garment is a guarantee that style is right and the value all there.

- Ladies' Neck Furs. Ladies' Fur Coats. Ladies' Novelty Hats. Ladies' Tourist Coats.

You can't afford to spend a cent for Furs without seeing first what we have to offer.

Dineen's CANADA'S LEADING FURRIERS. 140 Yonge Street, TORONTO.

TEACHERS IN ROCHESTER.

Three Hundred From Toronto Schools Attend Convention.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 18.—(Special).—More than 300 officials and teachers of the Toronto public schools are in attendance at the annual convention of school superintendents of New York, now in session in this city.

The Toronto delegation reached the city at noon. When they appeared in Main-street their badges and fine appearance attracted public attention everywhere.

Inspector Hughes spoke at the East High School to-night, before a big audience on "Productive Scholarship in Art." The burden of his discourse tended to demonstrate how the economic and the educational arts are in unity.

The G.N.W. Telegraph Company last night received the following telegram from an undertaker in Marquette, Mich., addressed to "Mrs. J. Collins, Toronto."

"Sister Elizabeth died suddenly this morning. What shall we do?" The Telegraph Company were unable to find Mrs. Collins.

Two Crushed Under Bridge. Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 18.—A stone bridge over the Linsville Creek, near Whitehaven, collapsed to-day. Two workmen were instantly killed, while another was probably fatally injured.

CASTORIA. The Kind You Have Always Bought. Bear the Signature of J. C. Ayer & Co.

The Saving Habit. Many know how to earn—but few have the knack of saving. Small sums systematically saved lay the foundation of future health and affluence.

Makes The Sovereign Bank of Canada. Assists you to save successfully. Deposits of from $1.00 and upwards received. Interest paid 4 times a year. MILLIONAIRES. C. B. GUMBERLAND, Manager. Messrs. MACDONELL & DOLLAND. Main Office: 28 King St. West. Market Branch: 168 King St. East.

YORK COUNTY AND SUBURBS

FALLS 40 FEET, LITTLE HURT

NARROW ESCAPE AT JUNCT.

Stepped on Loose Brick and Fell From a Scaffold.

Toronto Junction, Oct. 18.—The sudden death of Mr. Peter Kilne of 86 Uxbridge-avenue occurred shortly after 8 o'clock this morning, after an illness of only a few hours' duration.

Deceased, who was 73 years of age, worked as usual yesterday and was in the best of spirits last night. He retired at the usual hour, but at 1 o'clock this morning was taken violently ill. From 1 o'clock he sank rapidly until he ended his sufferings. Deceased leaves a widow and six daughters and one son. Two daughters, Misses Lena and Mabel, reside at home, while Mr. Alfred Kilne lives at 84 Uxbridge-avenue.

The other daughters are Mrs. Cox, Thornhill; Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Nelson, Toronto Junction; and Mrs. Miller, Hamilton. The deceased was a member of the Independent Order of Foresters, Court Davenport. The funeral will be conducted under the auspices of Court Davenport and Court Toronto Junction on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock to Davenport Methodist Church, thence to Prospect Cemetery.

At 11 o'clock this morning, Bert Joblin, a carpenter employed on the Dominion Carriage Company building on Campbell-avenue, while laying a floor on the top flat, stepped on a loose brick and fell the distance of 40 feet.

His fall was broken by striking projection, otherwise he would have been instantly killed. Dr. MacNamara found the injured man suffering from a cut on the head, behind the ear and a cut over the left eye. He was taken to the Western Hospital in the private ambulance of William Spear. He lives on Havelock-street in the city.

A 300 horsepower boiler passed through town this morning on a couple of trucks drawn by eighteen horses. The boiler was constructed at the Canada Foundry, and is for the Stark Electric Light Company at the Hammer.

Three hundred citizens of the town took advantage of the holiday and the weather and attended Woodbridge Fair.

North Toronto. The old framework of the town's waterworks system is fast disappearing, and is making room for the laying of the foundation for the new steel water-tank.

Sam Dickey of Toronto started yesterday to excavate the cellar and foundation of a two-story brick dwelling on Yonge-street, just south of Eglinton-avenue.

The only church in town in which thanksgiving services were held yesterday was St. Clement's. Holy communion was celebrated at 8 a.m. and at 10.30 a.m.

Although yesterday was a legal holiday tax collector J. M. Whaley sat in the town hall from 9 a.m. till 10 p.m. gathering in the filthy lucre of the taxpayers' spare cash, and was kept fairly busy all the time. Mr. Whaley says he will allow the discount today.

Much complaint is made amongst taxpayers in this school section at the increase in their tax bills for 1906. The county, township and dog tax is about the same rate as in other years, but the school tax is every way against the withstanding the fact that there is a vast increase in the taxpaying element in the school section.

Samuel Dorley, blacksmith, of Montgomery, near Stouffville, died very suddenly of apoplexy last Saturday morning. Mr. Dorley was a member of the Stouffville Lodge No. 109, A.O.U.W.

Mrs. Monkhouse, wife of John Monkhouse, merchant tailor, Stouffville, succumbed last Sunday morning to an attack of typhoid fever. Mrs. Monkhouse was a daughter of John Bartholomew, a prominent pioneer farmer of Whitby, and she was buried in the Stouffville cemetery on Tuesday.

Judge Morgan will hold court of revision in the council chamber here on the 24th inst.

Sugar beets for the Berlin sugar factory have been grown in great abundance in this vicinity this year and are now being shipped by the carload.

Farmers have found them a profitable crop and are now growing them more extensively.

MANOEUVRES AT MONTREAL

Invading Force Turns Left Flank of Defence and Takes Gun.

Montreal, Oct. 18.—(Special).—The attack and defence of the western approaches to Montreal were carried out to-day by the Montreal garrison, augmented by the 53rd Infantry, the Queen's Own Hussars and the 23rd Field Battery, the net result being that the left flank of the defence was turned and one 47 inch gun of the heavy artillery fell into the hands of the invaders.

A force of 1600 men formed the attack, aided by a troop of cavalry and two field batteries, the defence being conducted by two infantry battalions, a squadron of cavalry and four guns of a heavy battery.

The ground was admirably suited for the manoeuvres, and the general plans were carried out with admirable ability, considering the occasion was the first one in which the garrison had participated.

Major-General Lake was present and after the action gave the assembled officers the benefit of his critical comments upon the manner in which the affair had been carried out.

At the military banquet this evening, augmented by the D.O.C., gave officers and men every praise and promised more extensive operations for next year.

STILL IN JAIL. No bail has been granted for Tom Lewis, accused of perjury.

KILLED WHILE HUNTING. Metcalfe, Oct. 18.—Harry Cummings, a Barnardo boy, was accidentally killed while hunting to-day.

LOOK SMART

Half the time looking smart is as good as being smart. You are sure of the looks in the overcoat part of the disguise if you buy yours at Fairweather's. Cheviots, meltons, tweeds, all the latest in cut and the very best materials that the price can command.

Hats.—We sometimes think men know where the best ones are without our telling them. Men have a way of telling each other that "the best hats are at Fairweather's." Derbies $2 to $6. Silk $5 to $8.

Fairweather's 84-86 YONGE ST. SHAM FIGHT. Continued From Page 1.

Charge of the Queens Own. "Charge down the hill on 'them, boys!' from Major Rennie, and helter-skelter the men went down the hillside, and into the ditch in the middle of the plain, they ran. Down the road, to the right, galloped the R.C.R., followed by the Second Battalion, Q.O.R., in extended order.

The centre column, No. 2, commanded by Col. Robertson, was composed principally of 48th Highlanders, in command of Col. Robertson. A and B companies of the 48th, in charge of Capt. Catto and Harbottle, in command of Maj. Hendrie. A section of artillery led the main body, followed by the 13th Battalion, Q.O.R., and the Army Service Corps.

The third column, which successfully executed the feint attack, and turned the attention of part of the 13th of Hamilton and the 19th of S. Catharines, was marshaled by Capt. Burnham, and composed as follows: St. Albans Cadets, A. Co., Highlanders, one company of the R.C.R., the Maxim gun detachment.

Col. Gibson Was Slow. The delay of Col. Gibson's force in mobilizing had, undoubtedly, a great deal to do in deciding the fortune of the day. It wasn't the fault of the commander, but, rather, is blame to be attached to the railways. The orders called for a mustering of the grey forces at 10.30 a. m. It was actually 11.20 a. m. when the 19th and two battery companies of the 13th detached, so that the greys were really about an hour late in getting on the march.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

troop attempted to cross. Two companies from No. 1 Battalion of the Q.O.R., the 48th of Kiltes, and the Body Guards were ordered ahead, Major Rennie commanding, ford the river in a canoe, with instructions to continue until they reached the river's attack. Col. Gunther controlled the rear body.

The Army Engineers showed their worth. In 25 minutes they had constructed a six-span pontoon bridge 60 feet long, and strong enough to carry the main train of elephants. It was with extreme difficulty that the heavy guns were taken down the steep side of the ravine, which was fully 100 feet deep. But one team of horses could be utilized, with ropes attached to the axles a company of soldiers at once became engaged in horse work.

To add to the excitement, rear after rear of cannon, followed by the sharp rattle of musketry, to the south, gave evidence that the advance of the second column had "started" the game. This was the meaning, then, of their march over back-road being uninterrupted. They were too late.

Over the bridge they bowled, and up the west bank, leaving the engineers to their task. Meanwhile, the two companies and the Body Guards had been put into a "double quick" south on the gravel road, and the bunch of them, having reached an excellent vantage point on the west bluff of the ravine, overlooking a sloping plain, which ended in a wooded on the south and the river flows on the east, took possession and watched.

Across the flats, towards Erindale, each of the river and the Highlanders were playing a hot game of five-and-take with the Dufferin Rifles, who had beaten back their firing line and blown up the bridge and made the river flow and woods lining the Dundas-road. Major Rennie viewed the scene calmly. "I guess the 48th can attend to them until our main body arrives," he remarked.

But the next moment all was bustle in the firing line. No. 2. There was a rustle in the wood below. A white helmet parted the shrubbery, another and another. The next instant, a man in a blue uniform, who were full of them, "Fire, men!" One volley; a return; two volleys; again a return; but it was only a half volley. The riflemen had ducked back into shelter.

It was a surprise for the riflemen, said Capt. Mitchell of the Q. O. R.

A desultory fire was kept up, however, whenever a white cap showed itself. The riflemen were not to be taken by surprise, and it was evident that something was doing.

A fierce cannonade was going on on both sides of the firing line. No. 2. Not mistaking the coveted territory, distant booming was also audible about the farther down.

The golfers being entertained at home by the Grenadiers, and a section of the hostile 13th of Hamilton, the R.C.R. were preparing to charge from a private. He was riding the something was doing in the woods.

Down went the advance guard of No. 2. They were in the bushes, but before they had pressed the trigger, the R.C.R. shook under them, and looking back they beheld the 9th Field Battery and the 13th of Hamilton, who were rushing, and behind them came the main attack—cadets, Kilties, Kilties.

Charge of the Queens Own. "Charge down the hill on 'them, boys!' from Major Rennie, and helter-skelter the men went down the hillside, and into the ditch in the middle of the plain, they ran. Down the road, to the right, galloped the R.C.R., followed by the Second Battalion, Q.O.R., in extended order.

The centre column, No. 2, commanded by Col. Robertson, was composed principally of 48th Highlanders, in command of Col. Robertson. A and B companies of the 48th, in charge of Capt. Catto and Harbottle, in command of Maj. Hendrie. A section of artillery led the main body, followed by the 13th Battalion, Q.O.R., and the Army Service Corps.

The third column, which successfully executed the feint attack, and turned the attention of part of the 13th of Hamilton and the 19th of S. Catharines, was marshaled by Capt. Burnham, and composed as follows: St. Albans Cadets, A. Co., Highlanders, one company of the R.C.R., the Maxim gun detachment.

Col. Gibson Was Slow. The delay of Col. Gibson's force in mobilizing had, undoubtedly, a great deal to do in deciding the fortune of the day. It wasn't the fault of the commander, but, rather, is blame to be attached to the railways. The orders called for a mustering of the grey forces at 10.30 a. m. It was actually 11.20 a. m. when the 19th and two battery companies of the 13th detached, so that the greys were really about an hour late in getting on the march.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

Col. Mason, as a senior inspecting officer, in making his report to Lord Aylmer, laid great stress on the point, but it was later argued that, in any case, the result would have been victorious for the forces of Col. Davidson, the dispositions made by Col. Gibson being the result of a feint attack.

The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected. The Duke to the north, which it was admitted, was not expected.

The Simpson Company Limited. H. H. FUDGER, PRESIDENT. J. WOOD, MANAGER. PROBABILITIES—Unsettled with occasional rain; about the same temperature.

FRIDAY, OCT. 19.

What Men Like The Kind of Clothes and the Kind of Service Offered By Simpson's "Men's Store"

Our Men's Store grows more popular from season to season. The reason for it is not far to seek—no farther than the corner of Yonge and Richmond streets.

The Men's Store sells the very best Clothing to be had in Canada. We see it all and choose. When you come here for a suit you may see the pick of all that is to be had in this country at the different grades of prices, together with certain of the best and most famous branded lines from the United States.

In Shirts, Hats, Boots, etc., we offer comfort, service and style for far less money than smaller or less careful stores. Men wait on you and are quick to understand. Come to-morrow and let us outfit your wardrobe for the new season at hand.

Men's Black Melton Winter Overcoats, single-breasted Chesterfield, with black slightly fitting to waist, flare skirt and creases on the hips, Saturday..... 13.50

Imported Dark Oxford Grey English Cheviot Winter Overcoats, full back three-quarter Chesterfield, velvet collar, on sale Saturday..... 15.00

Men's High Grade Fine Black English Cheviot Winter Tweed Suits, a rich dark brown and black mixture, showing a colored over check, single-breasted saque style, serge linings, on sale Saturday..... 20.00

Men's Heavy Weight Imported Fall and Winter Tweed Suits, a rich dark brown and black mixture, showing a colored over check, single-breasted saque style, serge linings, on sale Saturday..... 10.00

Men's Imported English Worsteds Suits, dark navy blue and black, soft finished clay, in a medium fine twill, winter weight, single-breasted saque, with deep vent, Saturday..... 12.00

Men's New Fall and Winter Suits, a fine imported fancy worsted, neat grey and black mixture, showing faint stripe effect, with colored thread running through, single-breasted saque, fine serge lining, Saturday..... 14.50

Youths' New Fall and Winter Weight Long-Pant Suits, imported tweeds, in a grey mixture, showing broken stripe, the latest double-breasted style, with long lapels and deep centre vent, suits cut medium width in legs, 33-35, Saturday..... 10.00

Boys' Imported English Tweed Double-Breasted Three-Piece Suits, a good serviceable material, in a dark brown and black mixture, with large overplaid, sizes 28-33, Saturday..... 5.00

Boys' Heavy Weight Cheviot Finished Frieze Winter Overcoats, the long single-breasted Chesterfield, with plain Italian cloth linings, neat velvet collar, on sale Saturday..... $4.00

Sizes 24-28 ..... 4.50

Sizes 31-33 ..... 5.00

Sizes 34-35 ..... 6.00

Boys' Fine Imported English Cheviot Winter Overcoats, Oxford grey and black shades, in the correct single-breasted Chesterfield style, serge linings, neat velvet collar, haircloth sleeve lining and well tailored, Saturday..... $6.00

Sizes 24-28 ..... 6.50

Sizes 31-33 ..... 7.50

Sizes 34-35 ..... 8.50

Boys' New Winter Russian Overcoats, a handsome grey plaid fancy tweed, heavy weight, made to order, with close up at throat, fine black military braid trimming, with large half ball gilt buttons, sizes 21-26, Saturday..... 4.00

Buy a Victor Boot For Style, Comfort and Wear. The Great $3.50 Shoe for Men. Special showing now of new fall and winter weight styles.

An Eight o'Clock Special. Men's Overcoats Which Were Made to Retail at $12.00, $13.50, $14.00, $15.00 and $16.00, on Sale Saturday Morning at $8.95.

75 only Men's Sample Overcoats, all high-grade materials, made in the newest styles, consisting of English meltons, beavers and cheviot, also some Scotch coating in a smooth Saxony finish, among the lot a number of paddock or Newmarket Coats, all are handsomely tailored and trimmed, with lining to match, sizes 36 to 42, ranging from 12.00 to 16.00, on sale Saturday morning at..... 8.95

Guards, who were exposing themselves with reckless abandon on the opposite bank.

Across Country. Meanwhile, the other units of the force were being marched across country, or by way of the Middle-road, which leads to the Credit River at a point a little below the Golf Club grounds. The Dufferin Rifles formed the left wing of the army, with the 19th from St. Kitts, in touch with them on their right, the tried veterans of the 13th Battalion of Hamilton were ordered to the crest of the hill, and the 51st Highlanders of Hamilton making up the right flank, which extended north to the Toronto and Niagara Power House, about half a mile below the Golf Club. Taking into account the somewhat tortuous windings of the Credit, defenders covered about five miles from Erindale to this point, and kept their cohesion pretty well at the same time. The river, below the point at which it was crossed by the power line, was known to be unfordable, so that an attack in this quarter was not to be guarded against.

Col. Cameron was in command of the 38th, Lieut.-Col. Moore of the 13th, Lieut.-Col. Campbell of the 19th, and Lieut.-Col. Logie of the 91st.

What Might Have Been. Had Col. Davidson chosen to direct his attack south of Erindale, it is certain that his troops would have been treated to a pretty warm reception, if not hurried back in disorder.

Apart from the 38th and a section of the 91st, who aided in the attempt to stem the onslaught from the north, it was a dull day with the defenders. The great body of them were practically sidetracked, without being aware of the strategy of Col. Davidson in providing a "containing" attack on the centre and a feint attack on his extreme left, serving the purpose of holding the attention of the opposing force, while the Queen's Own forced the river far to the north and began the march that ended in all but the rout of the defenders.

The men from St. Kitts had little to do. Perched on the top of the hill, they occasionally had a chance to pepper an odd Highlander or a redcoat, but they had nothing approaching warm work at any stage. The 13th were more fortunate. Extending from the Golf Club grounds to the bend in the river, about a mile below Erindale, they also protected the Middle-road. A fairly brisk encounter with a force of venturesome redcoats, resulting in the latter retreating from the river bank to cover, was their share of the glory. Strengthening their position, which was a well-nigh impregnable one, they had a battery of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, and a Maxim gun, both stationed on the heights commanding the bridge at Erindale. A second firepiece was held in reserve some distance in the rear to guard against a flank attack.

The 91st were practically held in reserve all day to guard against a flank attack, spreading to the south. A flank attack, and a strong one, which aligned all right, but it was content with penetrating to Erindale, and hence the killed mountaineers were of little or no use during the day's tactics.

The way in which disposition was made of the 19th also made the regiment of slight active assistance. Col. Gibson, in stating his plan of defence, contended that he had at least been able to hold his position opposite Erindale from start to finish, and also claimed that the force of Highlanders, who rushed to the heights as the main attack moved down, were the virtual annihilated by the volleys of musketry poured into their ranks, yet the assailants were not ruled out of action.

Successful Manoeuvres. Col. Davidson, in laying modest claim to the victor's laurels, declared that the main attack, the holding attack, and the feint had all proved successful manoeuvres. There was no opposition to the main attack, which was in sufficient strength to easily "roll up" the left flank of the enemy. There had been no intention to cross the river at Erindale. The point at the Golf Club grounds was so successful that a section of that force had actually been able to bring up his reserves in such a way as to turn defeat into a rout, and in this he believed he had been successful.

Col. Mason, in summing up the work of the defenders, said that the 19th had proven of little utility, and that the 13th had simply held their ground. He criticized the 91st for slowness in moving forward to take up their position. Col. Gibson had made a mis-

ENGLISH Brass Goods. INCLUDING LOCKS, GONGS, PEN TRAYS, INK WELLS, PENS, VASES, WAITERS, CANDLESTICKS, ETC.

RICE LEWIS & SON, LIMITED. Cor. King and Victoria Sts., Toronto.

DR. SOPER. Specialties: Asthma, Eczema, Epiphora, Strabismus, Iritis, etc. One visit advisable, but impossible, send history and cent stamp for copy of Circular. Address: DR. A. SOPER, Toronto Street, Toronto, Ontario.

EARL GREY RETURNING. Winnipeg, Oct. 18.—Earl Grey, who has been enjoying a season of duck shooting on Clondeboe Bay with General Kitchener arrived here and is a guest at government house. He will leave for Ottawa to-morrow evening.