Ida Waterman, who is an important member of the Royal Alexandra English Players, is the proud owner of what is probably the most unique collection in the world. Stamps have no interest, for this clever actress; birds, she believes, belong in the air and on the trees. Miss Waterman's collection is made of frocks.

Two large rooms in her New York apartment are fitted up with racks upon which hang no less than two hundred frocks, each of which she has worn in some New York production during the last ten or fifteen pears. Each gown is tagged with the name of the character by whom it was worn, the number of times it was worn, the frock that was in style at any par-icular time within the last fifteen years he appeals to Miss Waterman will receive on the following Friday for help

The actress is enjoying her engagement in this city, as it gives her an opportunity of adding materially to her collection, and she is making a Mrs. T. H. Holliday, 58 Howland Mrs. T. H. Holliday, 58 Howland point to wear new frocks in each part she creates while in this city.
