At comparatively trifling cost, the services of a senior medical student might be secured, who could attend daily, and see that all the medicines ordered were promply prepared.

It is felt that a room devoted exculsively to the accomodation of those in a moribund condition would be a very desirable addition to the present marked completeness and comfort of the "Home," at present there is no place without encroaching upon the room usually occupied in common by a large number of the inmates, and if it is occupied in this way, for any considerable time, serious discomfort is the result.

In the case of persons suffering from malignant diseases, loathsomeness, sometimes considerable, but always, more or less, is a neccessarily painful accompaniment. If it were possible to isolate such cases in in their advanced stages at least, such an arrangement would materially augment the comfort of the other inmates, and be quite unobjectionable otherwise.

In closing this report the Medical staff cannot omit expressing the great satisfaction they have uniformly felt on the occasions of their professional visits to this noble institution, in observing the excellence of its entire management.

They take great pleasure also in expressing their personal obligations to the excellent and very efficient Matron for the marked courtesy which she has invariably extended to them.

> Respectfully submitted GEORGE WRIGHT, M.D.
