

BEAUTY SECRET—COPY THE SPANISH SENORITA!

Put Her Comb in Your Hair and Lace Mantilla Over Your Shoulders, Actress Advises

BY MARIAN HALE.
New York—Study the American girl for smartness, and the French girl for originality. But when it comes to real intrinsic beauty, go to the Spanish senorita and copy her ways, advises Virginia Brown Faire, movie actress.
"Take, for instance, the high Spanish comb and the lace mantilla—is there a facial defect that cannot be remedied by their use?"
"Place the comb high and you have lengthened the broad face, wear it low and you have added a becoming width to the face that is too thin. And any single line between has its own particular grace."
"With the mantilla you can do even more, Miss Faire believes. Not only can you apparently change the architecture of your body and appear with quite a different shoulder construction than you honestly have, but you can express every mood with it."
"It's the coquette's stock in trade," she maintains. "By rearranging its subtle folds you can be as many different women in one evening as your imagination can paint, and that is the secret of charm—to be able to express infinite variety."
"She does not wonder that the Spanish shawl has been adopted by women all over the world."
"The most marvelous invention of any age," she calls. "As for color, the selection is endless. It drapes into any shape and the long fringe is pure fascination."
"The Spanish woman's costume with its tight bodice and full skirts, is a real inspiration. By it she can conceal a few extra pounds, and hence have a more calories per day than the straight woman who must get into one of these weight-raising models we are all wearing now."

VIRGINIA BROWN FAIRE AS A SPANISH BEAUTY.

HELPER PROVED TO BE PRESIDENT

Station Agent on C. P. R. Had Happy Experience With Mr. Beatty.

Dorval, about 10 miles west of Windsor Station, Montreal, is one of those little places where nothing much ever happens. Commuters use it going to and from pretty homes on the near-by banks of the St. Lawrence River. At other times it's a quiet enough place, particularly on a summer's evening about 8 o'clock.
That is why the station agent there, working long after regular hours one evening, appeared to be a very lonely young man, even though he was too busy at his desk to notice it.
He was a young agent, temporarily on the job to replace a man on holidays, and the monthly balance sheet, the first he had ever tackled, refused to balance with the excellent receipts in Canadian Pacific circles. Vainly he put one set of figures against another until the prospect of an all-night job began to be unpleasantly assured.
Appeals to Stranger
At a point where hope seemed about to finally dissolve, footsteps sounded from the other end of the station platform. They advanced until the falling evening light at the doorway was blocked by a figure, and a voice asked: "Do you know if No. 17 is going to stop here tonight?"
The young agent did not know and he said so. He knew little except that the balance had to be found if it took a week. The stranger walked up and down the platform while two friends who had come with him engaged in conversation at the far end. He had spoken as one who knew something about trains, he might even know something of station's balances. The young man was desperate enough to try anything, besides the stranger's face was not unfamiliar; he had seen it somewhere, probably about Windsor Station where railroad men pass and repeat like bees in a hive. Desperation impelled him to the platform.
"Are you a railroad man?" he asked. Obviously astonished, the stranger admitted that he was.
"Do you know anything about balance sheets?"
Only President of Road
The stranger did, and a moment later both he and the agent were busy with cash book, delivery book and outstanding sheet until, 15 minutes later, the noise of No. 17 slowing up outside he left the station and drove to a close, but not before several elusive items had been brought to book.
"You ought to be all right now," said the stranger going to the door. Check over the rest of the figures and you'll probably find your balance." So they left the station and saw his friends aboard the train.
As he hurried to leave the platform the youth turned after him. "I'm ever so much obliged to you," he said, "do you mind telling me your name?"
"Beatty," replied the stranger, but his pleasant nod and "good night" seemed to be in no way dispel the agent's sudden consternation.
"That is the name of the president of this road. You don't happen to be him do you?" gasped the youth.
"Yes," replied Mr. Beatty. "But that isn't important. The main thing is to get that balance sheet right!"

GOOD THINGS COMING TO THE THEATRES OF ST. JOHN
DUMBELLS TICKETS FREE OF CHARGE

Resorting to an old expedient to assure the complete reading of its announcement, the Imperial Theatre is offering three pairs of $2.00 Dumbell seats to the first lady, first gentleman and first juvenile of either sex who sends in to the manager a marked copy of the Dumbell advertisement in this issue, showing a word purposely misspelled. This is an old trick, to be sure, but it is worth while to read this interesting program in the hopes of securing the $4.00 worth of tickets in each case. The Dumbell shows have in some instances in the past contained a program of merit but the attraction coming next week is so completely new and sparklingly novel that the Imperial wants it thoroughly understood and noted abroad. Hence the publication of this program and the special inducement to read it thoroughly. The program appears in today's Telegraph and both evening papers as well as that all St. John will have an equal chance at seeing it. No answers will be opened until Saturday noon. They will be numbered in order of receipt.

WOMAN AND HOME.
Women are by instinct lovers of home life. It seems to be universally acclaimed as their sphere. Lady Rhonda says: "One of the greatest mistakes we make is in failing to realize that housework is highly skilled work," and Mrs. Hilton Phillips, M. P., a recently returned member for the British House, says, "I like my home better than the House of Commons." Yet in spite of this homing instinct, women are filling important positions in state, church and business. In Exeter, Eng., a woman has set up business for herself as an electrical engineer. In the U. S. A. they have a woman as deputy attorney-general, whose chief duty is to administer the prohibition law, and who, perhaps, is the busiest woman in the world. Even at the London Zoo they have women as curators of insects and reptiles. A woman is also in charge of the mycological department at Kew Gardens, which deals with the study of fungi. She declares that there is not much difference between a man and a mushroom, only a mushroom is much quicker in growing to maturity.

THERE'S HOPE FOR ALL.
Charles Darwin's father said of him "You care for nothing but shooting-dogs and rat catching, and you'll be a disgrace to yourself and all your family." Yet this fool of the family lies buried among the great in Westminster Abbey. It is remarkable how many youthful dunces have made good. Robert Clive the "Maker of India" was regarded by his school masters as an utter fool. Napoleon was looked upon as a dullard. Napoleon was the butt of the military academy, the Duke of Wellington was regarded at school as a duffer. Oliver Goldsmith, the man who wrote the best novel, took himself as the model for Moses, the silly son of the Vicar in the "Vicar of Wakefield," who took the family horse to sell at a fair, and exchanged him for a gross of green spectacles. Sir Isaac Newton, great scientist, long stuck at the bottom of the lowest class but one—Moral, "Nil Desperandum."
