policeman. Several policemen who had responded to the call for help were there, and that part of the drama was over.

At the East 104th street station the prisoner gave his name as Joseph B. Murphy of 407 Glenwood street, New York, but the police believe him to be Joseph Monahan, a former convict.

Reneto Merelo, 29 years old, of 1 lane 77th street, Spanish correspondent of a mercantile house, enabled him to trap highway robber who held him up at d'oclock; in the morning. According to Morelo, he was walking along at 80th street and 5 th avenue when a muscular youth stepped out in front of him, put a piston up near his nose and ordered him to hand over what money he had.

The highwayman seemed disgusted when Merelo could produce only $3,89. ""If you don't give me more money I'll kill you, he threatened. "Well, if it is a case of life and death. I'll get it for you if you'll go with me to a friend at 80th and 2nd avenue." Merelo replied.

The victim felt sure he would be able to turn the robber and his gun over to a policeman before they got there. The two men walked some distance, and finally encountered Policeman William M. Porter, a young probationary officer.

As Merelo and his captor passed More los suddenly turned and yelled: "Arrest this man he held me up and robbed me."

Porter seized both men. The alleged robber grunted a denial, but the policeman decide it. "Wait a minute, officer; don't be station and let the lieutenant decide it. "Wait a minute, officer; don't be station and let the lieutenant decide it. "Wait a minute, officer; don't be station and let the robber as they turned his and the next the young policeman knew he was looking into the muzzle of a pistol.

"Now you big bull," shouted the robber, with an oath," move and it'll be your life. He backed away still holding the pistol pointed at the policeman's breast, but he dared not move to get it. The minute the highwayman turned into the dark they fought all over the are for assistance and was afraid to shoot.
