In this connection, a subscriber states that he found one of his chickens apparently choked, throwing its head up and down, and finally the head was twisted around. In describing his treatment, he says: "We thought it would be as well to pull off its head, for we rarely saved a chicken in attempting to doctor it. I moistened the chicken's head and neck with kerosene, and soon after wound a cloth around it and pinned it on, which seemed to strengthen it some.
