acrice indignation against the marderer, if murderer there were go excite wonder, lift turned out that there were none. At 30 feet from the ingh road, in mid-day, a woman was und to have been done to death, in a hollow well, by a husband, to whom she had been married only seven months, and while she was should to become the father. Susplemons must go for nothing in all this matter; and there should be no impalience in weighing the death. He was med them to examine the evidence here had really been death if for figurarily, men had been hanged for the death of those, who, a few days af er, had been sees welking in the streets.

But this woman was doubless dou'd, then the question arouse did she die naturally, by a cidlest, or by her own hand. On that point there was little to mays for it seemed there was little to anys for its seemed th or by mer own mand. On that point there was lit-tle to may; for it seemed there, was little reason to suppose she died naturally; inatmuch as she was in good health in the morning. However, this one rea-son, there was, that she was with child, and like son the ewas, that she was with carro, and had a subject to subject. At any rate, she went to the well, and there was no reason to suppose she was taken there by force. Well, then, being there, she might have fainted; but the cid-water would, in that care, have probably restored her. She might have failed into the well, however, its stainting st, and had might and had dear to the water.

THE COURIER.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 26, 1851.

As we expected, Lord John Russell has been compelled to resume office; and, so far as we gather from the telegraphic despatch, the personel of the Ministry has undergone no change. It is said that Lord John was prevailed on by the Queen still to continue at the head of affairs-Her Majesty acting under the advice of the Duke of Wellington. Some details of the proceedings in Parliament, and of the Minister rial explanations, will be found in another column.
