ANTIQUES

In a recent notice under this heading mention was made of that most caepraced antique, the Portland vase. and decoration had upon the artistic industries of the last century and a hatf It was Sir William Hamilton, British Ampassador to the Court of Perdinand IV., King of Sicily, who secured and sent this treasure from Italy to England. Sir William was a great patron of the arts and crafts of his time, and accomplished much in the way of rescuing gems of ancient art from the seclusion of the tomb and other secret hiding places, and restoring them to usefulness as models for craftsmen in every kind of mater ial capable of being manipulated into form, workers in gold, silver, brouze, brass, ivory, marble, clay-baked and unbaked, glass and wood, all essaying to reproduce their beauti-ful features of form and decoration and this means developing craftsmanship and creating wea'th in many

Next to the Portland vase came the scarcely less renowned Warwick vase as a proof of Sir William Hamilton's forethought in selecting objects of art to serve two great purposes, viz., as antique specimens for museums and as examples for artistic craftsmen to

The Warwick vase was sent by Sir whilem to England about eventually sold by him to his nephew, the second Earl of Warwick, bence its name of "The Warwick vase."

The vase was discovered in 1770, in the bed of Lake Pantanello, in the neighborhood of Tivoli, near Rome, while excavating the ruins of the Tibartine Villa, the favor te retreat of Hadrian Augustus. It was sculptured by Lysippus, of Sicyon, a Greek artist, who lived in the fourth century, B. C., and is of white marble, standing 5 feet 6 inches high, with a diameter of 5 feet 8 inches, and has the liberal holding capacity of 163 gallons. The form and decoration is suggestive of the Bacchanalian trophy. The body is in the shape of a colossal wine cup. grape vine forms the principal part of the upper decoration, with the twisted branches forming the handles, and the feaves and fruit distributed naturally over the surface. Bacchanalian masks and emblems are around the centre of cup, and the lower part is draped by means of two panther skins, with heads and feet distributed to complete the full trophy scheme of decoration.

Perhaps the most satisfactory reproduction in recent days of this antique is that made in the "Black Basalt" body, invented by Josiah Wedgwood, about 1760, a specimen of which was recently exhibited in New York. Minard's Liniment for sale everywhere

Evolution of the Checker.

Evolution of the Checker.

That formidable person, the chancellor of the exchequer, who levies toll in the House of Commons to-day, draws his lotty lineage from the reign of Henry III. Henry, thinking it desirable that the tord high treasurer should be provided with a guardin, gave him one in the name of a "check." The checker, keeping his name, has now become the cornerstone of the treasury diffice. The Lord High Treasurer disappeared with the Duke of Shrewsbury, whom Queen death. It was George I, who put the office of Lord High Treasurer in commission in 1714, and in comimission it has since remained. Five persons have the honor—the first lord, three junior lords and the chancellor. But the chancellor proved too strong for all of them and the loand, once a reality has, like the board of trade, long since ceased to meet.—

KEEP LITTLE ONES WELL IN WINTER

Winter is a dangerous season for the little ones. The days are so changeable—one bright; the next cold and stormy, that the mother is afraid to take the children out for the fresh air and exercise they need so much. In consequence they are often cooped up in overheated, badly ventilated rooms and are soon seized with colds or grippe. What is needed to keep the little ones well is Baby's Own Tab-They will regulate the stomach and bowels and drive out colds and by their use the baby will be able to get over the winter season in perfect safety. The Grave of Cecil Rhodes.

"The grave of Cecil Rhodes, I think, is the most remarkably silent place I have ever visited," says Mr. Ambrose Pratt in his book, "The Real South Africa." "It is a serious though inspiring, sombre, forbidding and deso-lately grand place. While one stands gazing at the tomb scores of lizards, blue, green and gray, crawl from the crevices among the rocks and steal like brilliant phantom streaks across the tor. They are almost fearless of intruders, but they make no sound. Sometimes the distant shrilling of cicadae wounds the stillness with a faint yet piercing dagger thrust of song. But soon and always the eternal hush returns, and silence reigns supreme again. The world is full of great tombs, vast and awe inspiring, but there is neither pyramid nor tomb nor monument in all the world which can equal that of Rhodes' eleeping place in simplicity and majesty." The Crippled Bird.

A very remarkable instance of the sympathetic kindness of one bird to another is given by a lady who witnessed the incident in her garden. Upon the lawn there was a basin, which was kept supplied with water for the birds to drink. Among the birds coming to the garden was a crippled rook, which had lost one leg al together and had no foot upon the other, so that it was very helpless other, so that it was when it rested on the ground. day when this cripple was upon the drauk. Two of them flew away at once, but the third, seeing the crip-ple, became interested and went up to have a look at him. The inquisitive rook gazed at the cripple for a little while, put his head down to the ground several times, as if he were trying to make out what was wrong, and walked round the helpless bird, puzzled perhaps for a moment what to do. Then suddenly he made up his mind, and, putting his wing under the cripple's wing, he partly dragged and partly supported him to the water, giving him an extra tug to lift his head to the edge of the basin. Then his friend in need was seen to fill his best with water and dray some of it beak with water an drop some of it into the cripple's mouth. After being shown in this kindly way where the water was the maimed rook was able to help himself to it.

ART OF BATHING.

To Get the Right Idea Just Inquire of Any Healthy Boy.

The art of bathing has never been fully understood. It ought to be put on its feet. Some people feel that in order to bathe it is necessary to call in the services of a physician. Others bathe at the slightest provocation-on railroad trains and when they are visiting a family of ten with only one bathroom. Such people would call for a bath anywere—on a trolley car, on an excusion steamboat or when cross-ing the desert of Sahara.

Between these two extremes, the bathers and the non-bathers there lies a vast gulf. If these people could only be brought together — by arbitration be brought together — by arbitrati possibly—what a benefit to society!

Boys are the only ones who have the right idea. No real boy likes to take a bath or to be presented with one on a marble slab. Any healthy one on a marble slab. Any healthy boy will sink to any necessary mora level to avoid this. But any boy will go in swimming. In short, if there be about the bath the spirit of adventure, then the boy—whose instincts are nat-ural—will seize the bait. Swimming in April, with the water somewhat zero, it is a joy for him which would be properly resented in a bathroom. If we must bathe indoors there fore the boys ought to be in charge of the proceedings. And if they were all the mean, contemptible bathtubs the mean, contemptible bathtubs would be abolished and every house would have a swimming pool. Every-body has a motor car. Why not a swimming pool?

The question, "Are our eyes weaker-" is frequently asked by people who observe consety and who are dismayed by the remarkably large number of people who were glasses to-tay as compared who were glasses to-tay as compared are not degenerating. The eyes of the present generation are in no wise poorer, weaker or interior to those of our ancestors, notwithstanding the fact toat a far greater percentage wear glasses than formerly.

Ale proposantles are that the eyes of the human race are neither weaker nor stronger to-day than were those of our forefathers, unless it can be proved that the whole physique of the race to-day is weaker or stronger. As is the whole physique of the race to-day is weaker or stronger. As is the whole physical body, so are the eyes.

But much more is required of our eyes now than wise ever-required of our eyes now than wise ever-required of our ancestors. The strenuous struggle for existence to-day, the ever increasing complexity of our modern civilized life, the multinlying knowledge of the world in all lines of human endeavor, knowledge that must be mastered if we would rise and achive success, put far greater strain on the eyes of this generation than on those that have gone before.

Our schools are far more exacting and severe, the business and scientific world require closer application and more mainstaking care than ever before. Electricity has turned night into day, and much more work is now done by artificial illumination than in the past. Sharp compelition in every line makes it recessary to have the best vision obtainable.

Because of these exacting demands on our eyes, latent, imperfections, crusing eye strain are brought out and made marifyst ty ymptoms of discomfort and distress, compel? ling us discomfort and distress, compel? ling us discomfort and distress, compel?

Bandages can be prepared from the good parts of worn sheets or pillow slius, if perfectly clean. Benjamin Franklin, who was a wise philosopher as well as an eminent statesman, believed that one hour walking was worth four hours horseback riding, and more than equal to lolling in a carriage all day. He was loathe even to compare the latter as form of exercise, and doubtless would have been equally uncharitable to-wards auto-riding. In the summer there is no better form of exercise than rowing, which has the beneficial results similar to walking.

It is interesting to note the stress that is being placed by administrators of public health on the value and importance of physical exercise.
